Borah, Not Pacified.
Strawberries by Airplane.
Trouble for Republicans.
The Python's 6 Roosters.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.

IN WASHINGTON, where this is written, Senator Borah has just demanded a special session of Congress after March 4, for "legitimate reasons."

He was not pacified by the shelving of the World Court.

Apparently he does not share the opinions of big business that "the country is safer after Congress goes home."

STRAWBERRIES WERE delivered in New York yesterday, picked in Florida 11 hours earlier. Dudley Reed flew in with 432 pints and the trip was profitable.

Fruit picked ripe in Florida, California and on the Gulf Coast, will soon be distributed all over the United States through the air on the day it is picked. Refrigeration will not be necessary, the pilot going up high enough for refrigeration.

THE FACT that Robert H. Lucas, director of the Republican National Committee, did all he could, which was not much, to prevent the re-election of Senator Norris, has started fireworks.

Some senators think that an important official of the Republican party should not spend Republican time or money trying to defeat a Republican candidate.

MR. LUCAS says that Norris should have been kept out and suggests that the Republican party should put him out, now that he is overwhelmingly elected.

Senator Norris, you must know, does his own thinking and even suggests that the people whose taxes built the Muscle Shoals power plant, should own the plant instead of turning it over to private power companies.

SENATOR NYE finds that the Republican National Committee guaranteed a bank loan made by Lucas to pay for a literary campaign against Senator Norris.

Respectable Republicanism will find it hard to explain that treacherous slush fund.

Senator Cutting, of New Mexico, Republican, calls it "political thuggery."

INHABITANTS of the New York and other zoological gardens will have a cheerful Christmas. The New York python, 23 feet long, will have six fat roosters on Christmas Day. He eats only once a month and swallows his roosters feathers and all.

The chimpanzees, orang-outangs and other big monkeys will each have two extra oranges. Caribou and elk will have the food they like best.

AND ANY CRIMINALS locked up waiting to be executed will be asked as usual to write their own menu for the death morning. They may have anything they like, but usually order ham and eggs. Murderers have little imagination.

SOMETHING NEW in prohibition enforcement. Federal agents arrested a colored man headed away from shore in a rowboat. He confessed that he was rowing out to the 12-mile limit "to get some gin that is gin." He could not trust the gin of New York.

Recent alcoholic deaths testify as to the soundness of his judgment. But he was locked up in spite of his plea that if merely "wanting" good gin was made a crime, the prisons would be crowded.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, recalling the landing of Pilgrim Fathers on the shore of his beloved New England 310 years ago, proudly reminds you that "the weakest of us have the protection of an irresistible government." He says that "our circumstances compel us to have faith. Our humility now requires cultivation."

Americans have never been conspicuous by being humble. But they may acquire humility with cotton and copper at 10 cents or lower, wheat receiving artificial oxygen treatment from the government, oil and coal drugs in the market, and stocks so low there isn't much left for the bears to sell short.

THE POPE in addition to all his other work is demonstrating the possibility of making a small territory independent of nationalities around it.

Recently he began construction of a miniature air field for the use of helicopter planes, going perpendicular up and down.

A telegram from Vatican City yesterday announced work under way to provide the Pope's dominion with an independent water supply from deep wells.

Pope Pius is reported to be much interested in this work, a welcome relief from the heavy mental burden that is always upon him.

EDUCATION BY mail is old. Education through the ether or the "continuum," as Einstein prefers to call it, is new.

Bobby Jones, Georgia wonder, who gathered all four of the world's champion golf games in 1930, has signed a contract to teach golf "on the air."

Millions of old and young Americans will listen to this broadcasting more closely than they would to anything Prof. Einstein might say. A limited universe with time for its fourth dimension is dull, compared with a good drive or approach shot.

State Service Board Critic Fired

U. S. POWER HEAD OUSTS RUSSELL

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—Solicitor Charles A. Russell, critic of the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission, was removed from office today by the new Federal Power Commission.

It was one of the first official acts of George Otis Smith, new chairman of the commission, which also removed William V. King, chief accountant.

Previous to this, F. E. Bonner tendered his resignation as secretary of the Commission, which was accepted today.

NO REASONS GIVEN

Russell and King said no reasons were given for their removal, but Russell asserted he believed his dismissal was brought about by his recent action in attacking W. D. B. Ainey, chairman of the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission, in the Clarion River Power project.

While this case is under consideration in the district Supreme Court, Russell severly criticized Ainey for his failure to act with regard to the securities of the Clarion River Power company, charging the Pennsylvania body permitted the public to be "flim flammed" out of $6,000,000 through "watered stock."

VISITS HOOVER, FLAYS NORRIS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The Republican controversy over whether the party should repudiate "men like Senator Norris" flamed anew today.

After talking about the situation to President Hoover, Chairman Wood, of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, denounced the independent Norris as "a consummate demagogue." He announced intention to back to the limit the stand taken against Norris by Robert M. Lucas, executive director of the Republican National Committee.

FIRST TO SPEAK

Wood is the first of the administration regulars in Congress to speak out. The issue now seems

Rockne Told Breakdown Threatens

ROCHESTER, Minn., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Coach Knute Rockne, of Notre Dame, must retire from "his strenuous mode of living" or a complee breakdown may result, Dr. C. J. Barborka, of the Mayo Clinic, his physician, said today.

This warning, contained in a statement issued at the conclusion of an examination of the coach's physical condition, did not mean Rockne would have to quit his coaching position, Dr. Barborka said, but he warned the football master that his old trouble, phlebitis, was apt to recur or a breakdown result if Rockne did not foresake numerous "outside activities."

Apprised that Rockne was reported planning to rely on aerial transportation to take him to Los Angeles for the football clash between Notre Dame stars and a West-South eleven, Saturday, Dr. Barborka said:

"If Rockne flies to Los Angeles we will refuse to assume responsibility for his future care."

Pittsburgh Clearing House Unlikely to Follow Lead; Players Here Undismayed

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—The Clearing House officially announced today that after December 31 no more daily clearing house figures will be issued.

Weekly exchanges of the Clearing Houses will be made available to financial houses and responsible persons who are interested, it was said by officials of the institution today.

When asked if this information would be given out publicly or must be obtained privately from the Clearing House, an official said:

"We would rather you did not say, as we don't want the public betting on them."

He said he did not believe the exchanges would be made available to newspapers and news services.

AVAILABLE TO SOME

The figures can be obtained at all times for statistical purposes by responsible persons, however.

The action in discontinuing publication of the daily figures followed a conference yesterday at which the action taken this morning was considered because of the numbers lottery run all over the country and based on the daily figures from the Clearing House.

The Clearing House officials learned from firms interested in financial statements that the bank figures no longer served any useful purpose. Formerly the daily clearings were used as an index of the volume of business.

ENCOURAGED LOTTERIES

Apparently the most interested in the daily figures were those who ran illegal "numbers" games, lotteries in which the winners were decided by the figures The Clearing House has even been asked recently to place bets by persons who innocently believed the Clearing House itself ran the lotteries.

Such interest was taken in the lottery that numerous attempts have been made to have the figures changed or have the wrong figures published. Telephone calls

HOOVER TRIPLES WORKS FUNDS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—President Hoover said today the total expenditures by the Federal Government during the calendar year 1931 for public works would total $724,000,000.

The President said that when depression had first struck, he had been instrumental in obtaining an agreement between industry and labor that guaranteed as far as possible no reduction in wages. In view of this, he said, the Federal Government has necessarily required contractors to maintain wage scales at their pre-depression levels.

The estimated total for federal aid to highways for the calendar year 1931 was set by Mr. Hoover at $219,922,500; public buildings $173,869,000; rivers and harbors $159,857,000; ship construction $129,920,000; aircraft and air navigation $30,882,000; miscellaneous $9,607,000.

His statement said the $742,058,000 compares "with the rate of about $275,000,000 per annum prior to the depression."

PAUL MELLON TO BE BANKER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Paul Mellon, only son of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, is going to enter his father's vast banking house next year and learn to be a financier.

It has been reported that young Mellon, who has a flair for writing, was going into the publishing business at the conclusion of his post-graduate course in Cambridge University, but here today, visiting his father for the holidays, he dispelled that idea, saying:

"I feel that I ought to go to work in the bank so I can learn something of the management of father's interests, which are centered about Pittsburgh.

"I still like to write, but mostly for the sake of writing. I guess, after all, I ought to learn the banking business."

Both in prep school and later in Yale, young Mellon was identified with school publications.

Paul Mellon worked in the Mellon Bank here during the summer vacation. At that time he was undecided about his life work, but said his father would permit him to follow his own bent and had not insisted on his following a banking career.

'White' Christmas Is Promised Here

Fair and moderately cold weather will prevail, the local weather forecaster said, until afternoon when the mercury will rise.

Snow flurries, predicted for today and tomorrow, were expected to mantle this section in white. A slight drop in temperature is scheduled tomorrow.

W. F. Bickel, Retired Bank Official, Dead

W. F. Bickel, retired vice-president of the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., died of pneumonia in his home, 418 South Aiken avenue, at 1 o'clock this morning. He was taken ill Thursday. He entered the employ of the bank of 1881 and was made cashier in 1897. Until the time of his death he continued to take an active interest in the affairs of the institution.

Peace on Earth, Except in Spots Where There's War

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

We heard him over here.

That's the trouble. We hear them over here.

But they can't hear us over there.

This is the season of peace on earth and good will to men. And the world is at peace. Except for a few spots.

It would be even more peaceful if the spots didn't overlap.

There is a little broth of a skirmish in Russia, they're pulling and tugging in China and there's a bit of an old-fashioned bayonet fiesta in Spain.

But Spain is entitled to a war. It wasn't in the last one and wants to catch up.

King Alfonso was headed north and it looked as if the next cornerstone he dedicated would be in an igloo.

But the revolution seems to have simmered down for the holidays and King Alf is still on the imperial cane seat.

America is at peace with everybody. Not because we're turning effeminate. But because we can't afford to win any more wars.

So you can celebrate the Yuletide with the cheerful feeling that everything is as rosy as sliced tomatoes. We're in

GRAND JURY CALLED IN SPECIAL SESSION

Quick Indictments to Be Asked; Ohio Prisoners Linked in Manchester Job

The December grand jury was ordered recalled by Judge George V. Moore today to consider indictments against three alleged Perry State Bank hold-up bandits in New York, while detectives were momentarily expected to start for Ohio in an effort to identify three suspects in the Manchester Savings Bank and Trust Company robbery.

District Attorney A. T. Park asked for the recall of the grand jury to indict the Perry Bank robber suspects, stating this was an emergency, and that he was taking this step to pave the way for extraditing the three and "curb the crime wave."

At the same time two Pittsburgh detectives in New York, where three alleged bandits in the Perry State holdup are in custody, failed in their first request to open a safe deposit box of Benny Lipkovitz, wounded leader of the Perry Bank bandit gang. They will return to Pittsburgh tonight to obtain affidavits of bank officials that will enable them to search the box, as well as extradition papers.

SUSPECT HELD

Boyd received word from Akron detectives today that they were holding several men, including George Tehensky, under indictment on a robbery charge, for examination as to the Pittsburgh bank jobs.

In Cleveland police are holding Joe Harris and Morris Saltpeter, said to be an alias, for the Pittsburgh authorities.

J. M. Silk, secretary of the Perry State Bank; his stenographer, Miss Teresa Dimperfield, and other employes today identified photographs of Harry Hoover and Eddie Pishey, pals of Lipkovitz, in the holdup. Cashier G. J. Knight partly identified a photo of Lipkovitz. Dr. D. A. Atkinson, burgess of West View, positively identified a picture of Lipkovitz.

Manchester Bank officials failed to identify any of the suspects in the Perry bank robbery as having participated in the Manchester holdup.

Peggy Shields, of 605 Suismon street, identified a photo of Lipkovitz and his two pals. She then was released by police.

Public Safety Director Clark and Police Supt. Walsh warmly praised Inspector Boyd and his men for their capture of the three accused robbers in the Perry Bank holdup.

The cost of the project was estimated at $160,000, but the contract was awarded to Nardulli & Sons at a bid of $102,871.00. The work will be completed by August 1.

Betty Miller's Own Story Of Bandit Hunt

By BETTY MILLER.

(Betty Miller, who aided Pittsburgh detectives in trapping the Perry State Bank robbers, tells how she met the suspects in a North Side rooming house, and why she willingly "turned them up.")

Boy, but I'm glad this is over! I think I'll be able to recognize those other three fellows, but I didn't know them as well as I knew Harry Hoover, Eddie Pishney and Benny Lipkovitz.

Honestly, if everyone could know these three boys as I knew them, they certainly would be surprised to learn that they are bank bandits. Eddie told me he was a boxer, and that Benny was his manager. Harry was a former Ohio State football player, he said, and I believed him.

I never thought they would commit any crime, and that is why I did not hesitate to help Detectives Swearingen and Sullivan when they asked me if I knew these three boys.

Eddie and Harry were all right when I talked with them after they confessed to District Attorney Driscol. Harry said that he didn't blame me for identifying them, and he said he has all he gets coming to him. He and Eddie are glad that nothing more serious happened.

It was about two weeks before the robbery occurred that I met them. They all seemed so nice, that I was glad to know them. They came to live in the same house on Tripoli street in which I was living, while going to school.

I am not sorry that I have done what I have done, and the boys say they don't blame me. But maybe I'm not glad that everything's all over now! I want to get back to Pittsburgh.

THREE MORE BANK SUSPECTS CAPTURED IN OHIO

6 NOW HELD IN PERRY STICKUP

Attorney M. J. Driscoll in behalf of detective W. M. Sullivan and James Shewarigen, for a search warrant to open the box in a Bowery bank.

Justice Corrigan held that no such petition had been granted in 20 years, inasmuch as the court would have to assume entire responsibility. He assured Prosecutor Driscoll, however, that he would grant a petition if accompanied by affidavits of the bank authorities setting forth the serial numbers of the money and papers taken.

PAPERS NEEDED

The two detectives said they would start back to Pittsburgh tonight to obtain the necessary papers. They will return to open the box amd to attend a continued hearing of Harry Hoover and Eddie Pfahney, accomplices of Lipkovitz, who confessed yesterday to participating in the Perry Bank holdup, along with Lipkovitz and three others whom they said they did not know.

Hoover and Pishney were arraigned in Municipal Court today and were remanded to the Tombs for five days. In the meantime the detectives expect to obtain extradition papers. Lipkovitz is in a hospital with a gunshot wound suffered when arrested by a New York detective.

One of the alleged bandits revealed to the Pittsburgh sleuths that they were prevented from entering a Tripoli street rooming house, on the North Side, to get the silver left in a wardrobe by reading Inspector Faulkner's statements in the newspapers that the coin had been discovered. They had gone to Pittsburgh to get the coin, amounting to $1,500, but returned to New York after learning the money had been discovered.

ARRESTS UNEXPECTED

Arrest of Hoover and Pishney brought an unexpected climax to the Pittsburgh sleuths' visit here. They came here to question Lipkovitz, shot when he resisted New York detectives, Daniel Mahoney and Michael Ward.

Unable to talk with Lipkovitz, who is not expected to live, the detectives brought Betty Miller, 23, of Pittsburgh, who had known Lipkovitz. Hoover and Pishney when they resided in the Tripoli street rooming house in which part of the Perry State Bank loot was recovered, to see Lipkovitz. She identified him readily as one of the suspects Pittsburgh police sought.

GIRL PICKS SUSPECTS

After being hidden away in New Jersey, the Miller girl was brought back to New York yesterday following the arrest of Hoover and Pishney. She picked them out of a crowd of a dozen men. Later they admitted knowing her, and told detectives that they harbor no ill feelings toward her for identifying them.

Detectives Mahoney and Ward, and I. J. Kane of New York, together with Assistant District Attorney Michael J. Driscoll came to the aid of the Pittsburgh officers yesterday when they sought Hoover and Pishney, and when they went to examine the deposit boxes in the Bowery bank.

HOLDUP WAS 'LARK'

Authorities said that after the arrest of Hoover and Pishney, almost $500 loot and an automobile Hoover had purchased with part of his share, were recovered. In their confession the two youths admitted their part in the Perry State robbery and said that they did it for a "lark." They are now ready to take their "medicine," they said.

They insisted, however, detectives said, that they do not know the other three members of the band. They saw them several times, they said in their statements, but they never got to really know them. Detectives said that Lipkovitz secured most of the loot, and they expect to recover it today when his safety box is opened.

MERRY CHRISTMAS! -:- By Quin Hall

Bandit's Own Story of Holdup

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Harry Hoover, 19, Miami youth arrested here in the roundup of three suspects in the Perry State Bank holdup in Pittsburgh, made a complete confession, police reported. Hoover was interrogated as follows:

Q. "Do you desire to make a statement in connection with the Perry State Bank robbery in Pittsburgh December 12?"

A. "I do."

Q. "Do you know Benny Lipkovitz?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "Were you a participant in the robbery?"

A. "Yes."

Q. "Who was with you?"

A. Benny, Edward Pishney, and three other fellows whose names I do not know."

Q. "Is this a picture of Lipkovitz?"

A. "It is."

Q. Now, in your own way, tell me about this robbery.

A. Well, I met those fellows in Akron, O.—I was on my way from Miami, Fla., and we decided to go to Pittsburgh. We came by bus to Pittsburgh and went to 532 Tripoli street, Pittsburgh, where Benny had a room. That was about two weeks before we robbed the bank. When we started out we had a small downtown bank in mind, but that was right beside the jail or courthouse and the other fellows did not like the idea.

"BANK LOOKED EASY"

"Well, later, while I was taking a girl home I saw another bank. We went back and looked it over on Friday, the day before the robbery, and I got a $20 bill changed. The bank looked easy enough, and I told the other fellows. We came back the next day and went out Ohio street when we saw a Cadillac, owned by the president of the Bell Telephone Company. I walked around it, and pushed over the chauffeur with the point of a gun, and Pishney got on the other side. We tied the driver up and I took his coat and cap.

"Well, we drove back then and went over to the room. Benny wasn't there and we rode around for a while. Then the other fellows got a cab and we went to the bank. We went in and the fellows in the taxicab stood around because one of them was afraid. We all finally went in after leaving two on guard. We backed the men in the back part of the bank.

ALL HAD GUNS

"Yes, we all had guns. Then the fellows who came in the cab started gathering the money, which left Eddie and me with nothing to do. Edward went to the front to smoke a cigarrt and a fellow made a break as though to leave the bank and got as far as the sidewalk when Edward grabbed him by the collar.

"I went to the safe deposit vault where there was a cage at the back of which there was an entrance which led to another little place where there was a safe. I asked a fellow to open it and all the bills were thrown out and put together with strips of paper which was in there. Then I came to a large package which said 'negotiable bonds and large bills.' I threw it down and one of the fellows gathered up the bills and the halves and quarters.

DIVIDE LOOT

"We beat it then and went back to the room, and I left the chauffeur's coat on because I had my gun in the coat. We went up to the room in Tripoli street and counted out the money and the three fellows I don't know took their share and said they didn't want any change. We took the change and locked it up in a cupboard. The night before Benny had shipped his clothes in a suitcase to Philip Crown, 1509 Charlotte avenue, Bronx, New York.

"Benny split with Eddie and I and we walked around town. We went to the Stanley Theater and then got a bus for New York. We registered at the Mansfield Hall Hotel when we got there and we slept for a while until we went up to Charlotte street to see Phil. Then Eddie and I started back for Pittsburgh to get the change we left in the rooming house.

RETURNED FOR CHANGE

"When we got to Pittsburgh we saw where the police had found the money and we went right back to New York. Back in New York, we checked out of the Mansfield, and went to the Woodstock."

Q. "Well, how much money was taken from the bank?"

A. "Couldn't say. There were six fellows and we both, Eddie and I, got about $450 apiece. We took that money and opened an account in the Chatham and Phoenix Bank on the Bowery. We did not see Benny open either an account, or get a deposit box."

THE LEATHER COAT

Q. "Now, you say that when you went back to Pittsburgh you heard about the Manchester bank robbery and that six men answered the description of you six who did the Perry State job?"

A. "Well, three did."

Q. "You say that the leader in the Manchester stick-up wore a leather coat?"

A. "Yes sir."

Q. "Well, did anybody wear a leather coat in the Perry State Bank stickup?"

A. "Well, yes, Benny had one."

Pishney when questioned, said that he would corroborate everything Hoover testified to.

Bandits Planned to Kidnap Policeman in Holdup

By LEE CURRAN,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Harry Hoover, one of the three youthful bandits arrested in the Perry State Bank holdup, told detectives today the same gang had planned to rob a small downtown bank in Pittsburgh, with Hoover wearing a policeman's uniform.

A city policeman was to be kidnaped, Hoover said, in describing the contemplated robbery, taken to the Tripoli street rooming house, which was the rendezvous of the Perry Bank robbers, stripped of his gun and uniform, and held under guard while other members of the mob went to the bank and held it up.

The plan fell through, Roover related, because several of them thought the bank was too close to the courthouse, and traffic was too heavy to permit easy escape.

According to the detectives, Hoover was to have worn the policeman's clothing. He was to enter the bank along with Benny Lipkovitz, the reputed leader of the Perry bank holdup, and tell officials they had been sent to guard the bank on a tip from headquarters that a holdup was suspected.

Hoover said he was then to signal four accomplices outside who were to grab the money while Hoover, posing as an officer, herded the employes into the rear of the banking room. Hoover sketched plans of the first floor banking room in describing the proposed robbery. He is said to have added:

"I believe it would have been successful and I'm sorry we didn't get a chance to try it."

DROP 'NUMBERS' IN N. Y. AS BAN ON LOTTERY

Pittsburgh Clearing House Unlikely to Follow Lead; Once Tried but Resumed

from all over the country have been received at the Clearing House, asking for the daily figures. Many unauthorized persons have sought to gain admittance to the Clearing House building at 11:30 every morning, when the numbers were posted.

The Clearing House, in deciding to give up daily publication of its figures, breaks a precedent established in 1853 when the Clearing House was founded.

CONSIDER SHIFT HERE

Prominent numbers writers in Pittsburgh saw no cause for alarm today in the edict of the New York Clearing House Association stopping the daily report on which the nation-wide lottery is based. The Pittsburgh Clearing House still publishes a daily report and there are numerous other financial tables which change daily and could easily be used.

The Pittsburgh Clearing House is not likely to follow the lead of New York, unless gambling becomes very noticeable, according to Carl D. Fogle, manager. He says that at present he believes there are no pools operating on the Pittsburgh figures.

BANNED HERE ONCE

Ten years ago, Pittsburgh exchanges and balances were used extensively by the gambling fraternity, and the Clearing House Association here banned the daily report. It was soon found that the pools were using other figures, and the only result of the order was that the local financial community lost a valuable business indicator.

The report was restored after a few months. Other figures used by the pools when the clearing house was stopped here were the Federal Reserve and United States Treasury reports.

Director James M. Clark and Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh however expressed satisfaction on the New York ruling. Both stated the local Clearing House should follow suit. Clark asserted:

"If the Pittsburgh Clearing House would follow suit, it would be the killing of the 'numbers' racket. It would be the means of breaking up the writing and playing of 'numbers', that today makes gamblers of school children."

TIME FOR NEW LINES

The nine days of grace granted by the New York Clearing House before the daily report is discontinued will be ample to allow the numbers men here to lay new lines, according to persons in close touch with the organization. The heads of the lottery feared an action which would wipe out the figures over night.

A quick fade-out of the figures might have thrown the entire organization into confusion. As it stands, many of the pick-up men seem confident that the numbers industry will forge ahead to bigger and better things after the first of the year through some other channel.

placed before President Hoover, but he has said nothing.

Meanwhile the Republican independent group in the Senate was preparing for a serious dispute. Senator Norris himself issued a statement last night denouncing Lucas, and today Senator Brookhart, Republican independent, of Iowa, issued a statement which said:

"Secretary Mellon has no right to set up a Republican committee with money to override any Republican Senator who listens to the voice of the people.

"Robert H. Lucas says there is a cancer in the Republican party and that it must be cut out. He is right. But he does not recognize the cancerous part. The personal head of this cancerous growth is Andrew W. Mellon.

USED G. O. P. FUNDS

The Senate Campaigns Funds Committee, which discovered Lucas had financed some anti-Norris campaigning in Nebraska, yesterday found Lucas had used funds of the Republican National Committee in securing the loans he made from a bank here to pay for the anti-Norris propaganda.

Stunned by the furore of the sudden controversy, the Senate Republican leadership is watching silently. The Senate Republicans insist the issue of Norris' right to party recognition is not up to them and they are watching the attitude of the President and the national committee toward Lucas. The Kentuckian still has his job and, therefore, apparently the support of the party.

On reaching the capitol, Representative Wood—who also heads the Appropriations Committee—said he had told President Hoover:

"It is the duty of every Republican to stand behind Mr. Lucas. Although we all might not agree with the way Mr. Lucas did things, I am sure every real Republican agrees with his idea."

Wood later declared:

"It is time for the Republicans to speak out in meeting and rid themselves of people like Norris. He is nothing but a wolf in sheep's clothing. Why, I would a lot rather have to deal with a Democrat, or have a Democrat in the Senate, than a pusedo Republican like the Nebraskan."

PHILA. BANK TO PAY IN FULL

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Depositors and stockholders having claims of more than $2,000,000 against the closed Bankers Trust Company and its 19 branch offices were assured today the bank is solvent and that they will receive 100 cents on the dollar.

Plans already are under way for the reorganization and the early re-opening of the huge institution, according to Samuel H. Barker, president of the $55,000,000 concern.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The City Bank of Miami Beach, which underwent a heavy run yesterday following the closing of the City National Bank in Miami, did not open this morning.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Two Hartford banks, the Riverside Trust Company, and Pallotti Andretta & Co., were suspended today by Bank Commissioner Lester E. Shippee, following runs on both institutions which have been in progress since last July.

BESSEMER, Ala., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The City National Bank and the Bessemer Trust and Savings Bank failed to open today. Officials said they were "acting for the best interests of depositors."

RABBI GIVES SUPPORT TO DIVORCE

Opposes Forced Continuance Of Unions, Dissolved, He Maintains, by Discord

An interview with Rabbi Jacob Katz, pastor of the Montefiore Synagogue of New York, the eighth of a series on an unusual discussion of divorce laws, as published today. It presents his views, based on a close and intimate contact with New York's teeming millions.

By RABBI JACOB KATZ.

I am a Jew. I believe in divorce.

Were I not a Jew and were there no divorce laws in existence I would still believe in divorce.

I believe the most sacred relationship that can exist between man and woman is the state of marriage. And the thing that makes it sacred is the marriage of the soul.

SEES DISSOLUTION

Attack the soul and you attack marriage. How can there be a marriage without the mating of the minds? Destroy the mental comity of a man and a woman and the marriage is dissolved. There is no marriage.

Should man then say to that man and that woman, 'Go thou and cohabit together?' That is sadism. That is prostitution. That is all that is deplorable and unspeakable.

Rather the laws that are made of man should say, there is no longer a marriage. Go your separate ways. Live in cleanliness, live in holiness, lie in unrightness.

SYSTEM HELD FAILURE

If the water system of village fail, they build a new system. If the legal system of a village fail, why not build a new system?

The present system of regulating the lives of men and women has failed. We have a law that contemplates the body and betrays the soul. Why not a new legal system that considers the soul and not the body?

The offense for which the marriage contract is voided in New York is carnal. Why compel, by law, a carnal deed? Can that be a good law?

Are not the bootleggers of booze evil enough? Why breed bootleggers of the soul? But we are. There can be no question but that the moral fibre of our youth has changed. I am not one who will say it is for the better or for the worse. Suffice that it has changed.

CHARACTER CHANGED

So, too, has the moral character of all people changed. Why then, cling to that which has been proven not good; to that which has been proven unfit to meet the problem it has sought to solve?

The desire of the human race has ever been to move forward; to go higher; to be better. The law must aid and not impede that movement.

It is the desire of the people to free themselves of the hypocrisies under which they have been forced by the law to live. Let the law aid them in that desire.

The home is the foundation of the state. Destroy it and the state will fall. Build your homes on the solid foundation of truth, honesty, trust. Those are qualities that come from the soul, not from the law.

See tomorrow's issue for the next interview in this unusual series. It will present the views of Cosmo Hamilton, noted English writer.

Coolidge Opposes Price Fixing by Government

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

When trade declines and goods begin to accumulate, whether they are raw materials or farm or factory products, instead of letting the market take its own course there is always a great temptation to try some artificial remedy. Of late this has run to the device of having the public treasury assume in some way the burden of absorbing the losses of those who have suffered.

Calvin Coolidge

It is the duty of the government to provide highways and waterways. Under this head shipping may be assisted. Sometimes war or a great catastrophe requires the extension of credits. But local government must relieve the needy. In the general field of business, whether of industry or agriculture, government interference in an attempt to maintain prices out of the treasury is almost certain to make matters worse instead of better. It disorganizes the whole economic fabric. It is a wrong method because it does not work. It is better for everyone in the end to let those who have made losses bear them than to try to shift them onto someone else. If we could have the courage to adopt this principle our recovery would be expedited. Price-fixing, subsidies and government support will only produce unhealthy business.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

POWER HEAD OUSTS RUSSELL

REFUSES APOLOGY

Informed of the action of the Federal Commission today, Senator George W. Norris, (Rep.), of Nebraska, termed the dismissals "an outrage," asserting.

"They have fired two patriots."

Senator Brookhart, of (Rep.), of Iowa, and other Republican insurgents, intimated they would ask the Senate to investigate the commission's action.

BONNER UNDER FIRE

Bonner has been attacked by Senator Wheeler (Dem.), Montana, for some time. Ten days ago, when the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, of which Wheeler is a member, was investigating the qualifications of the new power commissioners, Wheeler tried to get Smith to pledge he would drop Bonner as soon as he took office. Smith refused to make any pledges before he assumed office.

This demand of Wheeler's upon Smith caused Bonner to write the committee that he did not intend to remain as a member of the commission.

Ainey Calls Russell 'Own Worst Enemy'

HARRISBURG, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Chairman W. D. B. Ainey, of the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission, declined to comment when informed by International News Service this afternoon that Charles A. Russell, solicitor of the Federal Power Commission, had been removed from office by George Otis Smith, new chairman of the commission. Ainey said:

"He is his own worst enemy. I don't care to comment on this action."

A fortnight ago Russell roused the ire of the commission chairman when he charged the Pennsylvania body was lax in its duties and was not "protecting the people of Pennsylvania."

Another disturbance appears in the far Northwest. The plateau high is still stationary, but with diminished intensity. Temperature changes were slight, but mostly towards colder over the Gulf states and the upper Mississippi valley states. Freezing temperatures with heavy frost extends all the way to the Gulf. In the far Northwest the temperatures are rising.

DETROIT, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Charles Christopher, 58, shot and probably fatally wounded Mrs. Fanny Brown, 45, a widowed school teacher, today, and caused a near panic at the Hutchins Intermediate School, when he fired two bullets into the woman's body as she sat in a classroom.

The shooting created intense excitement at the school. Children ran screaming into the halls.

Mrs. Brown, whose maiden name was Westfall, was born in Rochester, N. Y., and is said to be a member of a prominent family there.

The huge air liner is scheduled to leave Lisbon on that date for the Canary Islands, thence proceeding to Cape Verde, Natal, Rio de Janeiro, Havana and New York.

Dr. Dornier's announcement was made following a conference with Commandier Friedrich Christiansen and Chief Pilot Hans Merz. It was announced that Clarence Schildhauer, American co-pilot of the DO-X, would return to Lisbon on January 10 to be ready for the takeoff.

The DO-X has been delayed at Lisbon by fire, which destroyed a wing.

RIGHTS TRADES DELAY 'BIG 4' RAIL PLAN

Executives Holding New Parley in N. Y. Today; P. R. R. Wants Lake Line

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Executives of the four big eastern trunk lines—New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio and Chesapeake and Ohio—were understood to be holding another conference here today for further discussion of consolidation plans.

Although Wall Street has heard that the roads are nearer an agreement on this long-standing problem than they have been in several years, it was regarded as improbable that a solution would be reached immediately. So far, nothing official has come out of the series of consultations.

It is believed, however, that one of the proposals currently under discussion is sale to the Chesapeake and Ohio by the Pennsylvania of the latter's control of the Lehigh Valley in return for cash and trackage rights on the Nickel Plate along Lake Erie. The question of rights over the Lehigh to give Pennsylvania entrance to Bethlehem, Pa., is also believed to be a consideration in the discussions.

Were such steps taken, it is pointed out that the New York Central would probably seek full control over the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western and would agree to sell its interest in the Reading to the Baltimore & Ohio. The Central is understood to oppose giving the Pennsylvania entrance into Buffalo via the Nickel Plate or any other route.

Until the Lehigh Valley question is settled it is believed the disposition of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia, the Wheeling & Lake Erie and the Western Maryland cannot be determined.

NOTED BANKER DIES SUICIDE

BALTIMORE, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—T. Edward Hambleton, 44, president of the banking firm of Hambleton & Co., was found shot to death in his home at Lutherville, a suburb, today.

Judge William P. Butler, coroner, gave a verdict of suicide. The body was found by Charles Richardson, his butler, when he went to call his employer.

The banker, prominent in New York, Baltimore and European society, had just returned from a big game hunting expedition in Indo-China, during which his wife, the former Adelaide McAlpin, daughter of the New York hotel magnate, established residence in Reno to seek a divorce. They had been married for 20 years.

Mr. Hambleton was said by his friends to have become depressed over his marital difficulties and the death of his brother, John A. Hambleton, who was killed in an airplane crash a year ago.

Hambleton maintained homes both here and in New York after his return from service in the World War, in which he became a brigadier general of reserves. He entered the service as a major and won the Distinguished Service Medal, the British Distinguished Service Order and the French Legion of Honor.

KNOWN HERE

T. Edward Hambleton was well-known in Pittsburgh financial circles. He completed the financial promotion which resulted in the sale of the William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotels by the Pittsburgh Hotels Company to the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation under the Eugene C. Eppley management in 1928. Mr. Hambleton spent considerable time here consummating the deal between the fall of 1927 and spring of the following year.

DOOMED TO DIE, BREAKS JAIL

SALEM, N. J., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Charles Fithian, who escaped from Salem County Jail less than eight hours after he had been sentenced to death for the murder of a paymaster, was sought today.

Fithian, who is 22, got out last night by filing the bars of his cell and squeezing through two ventilator shafts after threatening other prisoners with a pistol.

Police believe the file and pistol had been smuggled into the jail and that friends of Fithian were waiting for him in a motor car.

With Peter Giordana, 25, Fithian was sentenced to die in the electric chair during the week of February 8. They were convicted of slaying William McCausland, Salem glass works paymaster, in a holdup October 24. Fithian blamed Giordana for the shooting. He said Giordana threatened his life if he failed to go along.

BRATIANU, FOE OF CAROL, DEAD

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Death has ended the Balkan historical drama written by the three Bratianus, Jen, the father, and Jon and Vintila, sons, who created a Rumanian dynasty which toppled their line from power.

Sixty-three years old, Vintila Bratianu, the last influential member of the family which for nearly 60 years moulded Rumanian politics, suffered a stroke of apoplexy last night at his estate, Milhaeti, and died soon afterward, leaving his bitterest enemy, King Carol, a clear field where he himself once had wielded power. Mme. Bratianu was absent in Bucharest when the end came.

Last June the Rumanian parliament voted 486 to 1 to enthrone the reurned prodigal, Prince Carol, as king. The single dissenting vote was that of Vintila Bratianu. It marked the end of the family's political power.

ARMSTRONG AVOIDS PARLEY

Commissioner Stays Away From Conference; Kline, Other Leaders Attend

Political seers say Gov.-elect Gifford Pinchot is sure of only two of Allegheny County's six senators in his fight against Senator Augustus F. Daix, Jr., for president pro tempore. The fact that Mayor Charles H. Kline attended the conference yesterday, and County Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong did not, was taken to indicate a split.

Pinchot made no comment on his conference with local leaders.

The two certainties are Senators James J. Coyne and W. D. Mansfield. Because of illness, Mansfield was unable to attend the conference. Senator Morris Einstein was out of town.

SENATORS NON-COMMITTAL

Senator Frank J. Harris after seeing Pinchot said:

"I have not committed myself."

Senator Herman P. Brandt said:

"I will have to confer with leaders in my district. I have not pledged myself."

Senator Joseph G. Armstrong, Jr., said:

LINING UP FORECAST

Pinchot showed no sign of disappointment after his busy day here. He is understood to have a slight majority in the state of the 50 senators without the Allegheny County delegation. During the holiday season, in the opinion of some observers, there will be considerable lining-up on the basis that Pinchot is to be governor for four years and if he chooses can wield a whip that might react on some who oppose him now and who will be seeking re-election before the session two years hence.

After an informal dinner in the William Penn last night attended by 50 "original Pinchot men," the governor-elect left for Philadelphia, from where he will go to his Milford home for the holidays.

Girls Rehearse Yule Play As Mother Kills 2, Self

LOGAN, W. Va., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Two little girls rehearsed their parts in a Christmas play to be given in a church at Whitman, near here, and while they read their lines, their mother and two brothers were dead.

A coroner's jury found that the mother, Mrs. George Cherebanick, 31, had taken her own life yesterday after shooting her eldest and youngest children, Michael, 13, and Charles, 3.

Three of her children were away from home because of the Christmas play rehearsal. They were Helen, 10, and Mary, 6, who were practicing their parts in the play, and George, 9, who had been sent to the church by his mother to tell the girls they should not come home.

Officers who investigated the shooting were unable to ascertain a motive.

Charles K. Harris, Writer Of 'After the Ball' Dies

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Charles K. Harris, 65, who entranced the nation under the spell of "After the Ball," is dead.

The song publisher died at his home yesterday after an illness of three weeks. Surviving are the widow, the former Cora Lehrberg, of Owensboro, Ky., and two daughters, Mrs. Richard Weil, of Chicago, and Miss Mildred Harris.

Mr. Harris was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., grew up in Saginaw, Mich., Milwaukee, Wis., and Chicago, and settled in New York. As a mogul of "Tin Pan Alley," he created a fortune from the publishing business in late years, but wrote no songs comparable to his earlier efforts.

"After the Ball" was born in a sweetheart's quarrel which Mr. Harris witnessed in a Chicago dance hall.

James Aldrich Libby sang it first . . . at the Bijou Theater in Chicago. It was a hit, and orders came so fast that Mr. Harris had to borrow funds to print it. As late as 1926, the lyric was selling at 5,000 copies a year.

Mr. Harris had the distinction of being one of the few men who threw out Mayor James J. Walker. When young "Jimmy" wrote "Will You Love Me in December As You Did in May?" the publisher turned him down at frequent intervals.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Riverside Memorial Chapel.

NATION WARNED TO STAY OUT OF COURT

Magazine Scores Tribunal As League Organ; Lays Propaganda to Financiers

Editorial review.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—Denouncing the so-called World Court as the organ of the League of Nations, the National Republican magazine in a leading editorial that will appear in the January issue, vigorously opposes the entrance of the United States into the judicial tribunal of the League upon any conditions whatever, and charges that financial internationalists are the "chief driving force behind this propaganda" to tie this country up to the League of Nations through its court.

"Shall America be Denationalized?" is the forthcoming editorial which reads in part as follows:

"American entry in the League Court would represent another step toward the fulfillment of the program, so ardently and persistently urged by Socialist and financial internationalists as well as well-meaning idealists, for the integration of the United States with the economic and political system of Europe. The chief driving force behind this propaganda is, however, that of financial internationalists who seek the security of huge foreign investments and large expectant profits from world-wide economic imperialism.

ORGAN OF LEAGUE

"The World Court is an organ of the League of Nations. It is called the judicial tribunal of that body. The American people have refused to permit this country to accept membership in the League of Nations for reasons so appealing and so generally understood that they need no repetition. We are asked, however, to submit ourselves to the jurisdiction of the judicial tribunal of the League, whose only body of law is that enacted at Geneva, or which the court may formulate for itself.

"Emphasis is placed upon the thought that the United States can, whenever dissatisfied, withdraw from the Court. Theodore Roosevelt declared that the United States should enter no international arrangement not thoroughly understood in all its implications in advance, and that once having entered it, we should accept the full responsibilities and penalties of our step. Acceptance of the League Court's obligations in so far as they are to our advantage, while claiming the right to reject any action we do not like, would only create additional misunderstanding with other powers.

"Under Senate Reservation V to the protocol, which foreign powers refused to accept, the United States would have had the right to decide what questions affecting American vital national interests could be submitted to the League Court for advisory opinions. Under the Root formula, we lost this right of veto and retain only the right of withdrawal, which, if attempted even in a matter we considered domestic, would call upon us the maledictions of all anti-Americans both at home and abroad."

Churches to Test Canned Talkie Services

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Talking picture machines will give mechanical church services in four Presbyterian churches here January 12-15.

H. Paul Janes, young member of the division of visual aids, publication department of the board of Christian education, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., gave a private demonstration of the program yesterday.

The equipment, if it satisfies the board, will be offered to churches all over the nation, Mr. Janes said. The program included an organ prelude—"The Angelus"—the showing of the twenty-third Psalm, illustrated in color with musical background; a number of hymns, two talking pictures and a postlude.

WOMEN HELD IN SHOPLIFTING

Charged with shop lifting, Ora Paulson, 42, and Louise Martin, 46, both of 3412 Forbes street, dressed in fashion's latest creations, were sentenced to serve five days in jail by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg to give downtown department stores an opportunity to investigate merchandise found in their home.

On a similar charge, Mrs. Agnes Wilson, 38, of East Pittsburgh, was fined $50. Mrs. Wilson told Magistrate Rothenberg the theft was her only means of getting a Christmas gift for her husband.

Thomas Casey, of 919 Federal street, arrested in a North Side novelty store, was fined $25 on a theft charge.

Charles Drake, of 810 Cedar avenue, North Side, late of New York, was ordered to leave the city after detectives described him as a pickpocket with a record. He was arrested in the North Side.

A lecture and a $10 fine was meted out to William Jones, a Negro, of 2318 Mahon street, after he admitted filching 15 pennies from the news stand of John Roberti, at Sixth avenue and Wood street.

Two young men were in Braddock General Hospital today with injuries suffered when an automobile in which they were riding collided with a street car in Braddock avenue, Brinton, last night.

Carl Hixon, 22, of 158 Merrigold street, Munhall, driver of the automobile, suffered a probable fracture of the skull and his companion, John Passay, 18, of 241 Freil street, Whitaker, sustained injuries to the back. The automobile was badly damaged.

Leadville's Pioneer Saloon Faces Padlock

LEADVILLE, Col., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The federal government has started proceedings to padlock the Pioneer saloon, as old and notorious as Leadville itself. The government charges prohibition and repeated raids brought no letup in the bar's liquor traffic.

Extra Help Added to Speed Delivery of 'Tickletoes'

Dear Little Girls:

Here I am head and shoulders in stacks and stacks of "Tickletoes" dolls that must be delivered before tomorrow night to little girls who have earned them. Here I am surrounded by scores of assistants who have no other thought in mind than that of bringing sunshine to the homes of little girls in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

And what a mighty task it is going to be to get all these "Tickletoes" dollies out before the trees are lighted Christmas Eve and, at the same time, make an effort to avoid bringing disappointment to the girls who have dolls coming to them.

Long before 9 o'clock this morning the crowds of children began to troop into my headquarters and the eyes of each and every one of them opened with wonder and astonishment as they saw my loveable "Tickletoes."

Well, it has been definitely decided that the doll distribution will have to continue until New Year's. I can't possibly take care of all the little girls who want a dolly before Christmas—particularly those who were late in doing what I asked them to do. It isn't, however, too late to send in the coupon if you will be satisfied with the dolly before the New Year. Yes, I have plenty of dolls. The only difficulty is in the matter of handling so many in such a short time.

I am glad that I have already been able to take care of so many and I can imagine the joy of all these little girls who are now making new dresses and wraps for their new playmates. Of course every "Tickletoes" is handsomely dressed in organdy but one of the first things every little girl will naturally do will be to think of new clothes for her doll. I'd like to see some of the new dresses that have already been made for my "Tickletoes." I know they are just wonderful.

Perhaps you have seen my wonder "Tickletoes?" Words will hardly describe this big, lovable doll. She does lots of cute things such as clasping her hands and playing with her toes. She's 20 inches tall and just the doll you will fall in love with at sight.

So, if you can wait until after Christmas for your "Tickletoes" it isn't too late to send in the coupon which will bring a letter back to you telling just what you will have to do to get her.

I sincerely hope that the bells will ring out rejoicing a Merry Christmas to you, for brother and sister, mother and daddy.

2 IN PARK BEAT BERCOVICI

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Attacked as he walked through Central Park last night, Konrad Bercovici, novelist, expressed the opinion today he was the victim of Rumanian monarchists who resented his political views.

Bercovici was set upon by two men and severely beaten. He fought back and his assailants bolted when a crowd began to collect. His injuries consisted chiefly of bruises.

The men first asked him his name, Bercovici said, and then pummeled him. He added:

"I am a Rumanian myself and I knew at once they were compatriots."

In the afternoon, the novelist had spoken before the American Jewish Congress, repeating his opposition to King Carol and the present form of Rumanian government. He has taken the stand in recent magazine articles that Rumania never would prosper as a monarchy and must become a republic.

WIDOW, FREED BY ITALY, HAPPY

ROME, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—After a trial of remarkable speed, Mrs. Lillina Vernon De Bosis, formerly of St. Louis, Mo., and Syracuse, N. Y., was free today following acquittal by a special military tribunal on charges of inciting rebellion by means of pamphlets circulated through the mails. She said:

"I am more than happy at being freed. Please tell my American friends how deeply grateful I am for their most kind and helpful interest."

Mrs. De Bosis is the American-born widow of the noted Italian poet, Adolfo De Bosis.

Three of seven others on trial with her on similar charges were less fortunate, drawing prison sentences of from three to 15 years. The remaining four, including a son of Mrs. De Bosis, escaped sentence.

Peace on Earth, Except for Few Spots Where There's War

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The farmers will soon have more money than the middlemen will know what to do with.

When the farmers have money everybody has it. It takes a little contriving. But we manage to take it away from them.

We used to think that a king had a pretty steady job.

Born in the purple. Saturated with poop and glory. And always sitting pretty provided he stays away from the Liverpool jump.

But since childhood's frothy hours turned into more mature complications we discover that being a king is no bed of roses. It ain't even a hammock.

We have seen many a crowned head pull in its neck in our time. And if this be treason we'll take another bottle.

There was Wilhelm the Twice. Where is he? Erbo answers on the blue network.

And Manuel of Portugal? There was a bunch of a lad. With the whole world at his feet he took off his shoes.

Franz Josef of Austria? He was an emperor when the war started.

He was stonearth of all he surveyed but lost his binoculars.

Constantine of Greece? Given the bum's rush. His son, Alexander, was knocked off by a monkey bite. Another son went to the bat and popped up.

And now Alfonso of Spain is getting boughred around on a hay ride.

Isn't it much better to be a free and amended citizen of the United States with a two-family garage, a four-tube radio set and free potato seeds from Congress?

They got Republicans over in Spain. Almost as bad as they have in Pennsylvania.

They're rough Republicans. They know the King can do no wrong. But they're going to correct his mistakes just the same.

We like our form of government. No matter what shape it takes.

In Europe a king is elected for life. That's why he can't get any insurance. He's here today and gone tomorrow. And he doesn't get a rain check. We would much rather have a two-week's card to a runaway horse and wagon.

LIGHT COMEDY, GIRL FROLIC AND STOCK MIRTH PLAY STAGE FEATURES

Mrs. Fiske Fixes the Jury And a Murder Trial Ends "Not Guilty"

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

JURY-FIXING is punishable by law, and the audience at the Nixon Theater last night would convict Mrs. Fiske of that misdemeanor or felony without question, if the witnesses could also be the jury. For if ever a jury was fixed, it was the one trying Yvet Yvet for the murder of her husband. At first that jury stood 11 to 1 for conviction, but the wiles, strategies, diplomacy, patience and strong-arm tactics of Mrs. Fiske, masquerading as Mrs. Livingston Baldwin Crane, finally brought about unanimous acquittal.

George Seibel

"Ladies of the Jury," as Fred Ballard's play is called, is almost a farce. Well, there are those who say our jury system is a farce, so the play may be stark realism. At any rate it is wastly entertaining, for which quality Mrs. Fiske is chiefly responsible.

As soon as she breezes into the court room with her lorgnette and her irrelevant questions, she runs the court house. Never was any court more henpecked or more conformable to the exigencies of dramatic stardom. Judge Fish sets some precedents that must make Jersey justice as memorable as the Pandects of Justinian. But what has that to do with Mrs. Livingston Baldwin Crane?

IN THE JURY ROOM

Two acts of the comedy are played in the jury room where six men and six women have retired to find a verdict. It looks like a foregone conclusion—the verdict must be guilty. But there are no foregone conclusions when Mrs. Fiske proceeds to fix the jury. One by one the eleven fall by the wayside.

The dramatist has done his best work in assorting that jury. Its foreman is Jay J. Pressley, played with perfect aplomb by William Ingersoll, four years a stock favorite in Pittsburgh. Ingersoll was the well-meaning, conscientious and determined juror who rouses the spirit of opposition in the others by a total lack of the diplomatic graces that Mrs. Crane brings into action.

Then there is the chorus girl who at once starts a flirtation with the Greek. There is the realtor, who becomes convinced that Mrs. Crane's instinct is infallible when she knows he is "an honest realtor." There is the soulful young poet of the Greenwich Village brand, and this Alonzo has his soul-mate in Cynthia. There is the young wife who finally votes for acquittal because she wants to go home to her Harry. There is the Scotchman who orders a big steak when he thinks the county pays for it, but coffee and doughnuts when it is charged up to him. The social crusader who asks every witness what church he belongs to, and the Irishwoman who is converted to acquittal when Mrs. Crane-Fiske talks Garlic and goes off into jags and reels. All these types are drawn with rich humor—and played the same way.

OUTSTANDING TYPES

Luke Conness as the realtor, Alice Cowan as the young wife, Elsie Keese as the chorine, Thomas Shearer as the Scotsman, and Kemble Knight as the poet gave particularly juicy and well-flavored performances.

In the courtroom scene that preceded the jury session Mona Smith as the maid on the witness stand and Will Geer as the doctor presented convincing portraits. James Seeley as the judge also gave weight to some odd rulings.

That is the whole secret of this play, comedy, farce—what you will. These characters are as juicy as if they had come from the Dickens gallery. They do absurd things, but we forgive them because they amuse us. "Ladies of the Jury" is amusing—hugely amusing—and the effervescent, imperturbable, resourceful Mrs. Livingston Baldwin Crane is the most amusing of all. We do not believe she exists—her infallible instincts exert no "chemical" or cosmical influence upon any one in the audience—but they all laugh at her.

Which is a good thing, for otherwise Mrs. Fiske would have to be put behind the bars as the most dangerous jury fixer in the Hoover hemisphere.

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS.

"Earl Carroll Sketch Book," first annual edition, presented in the Alvin last night, found the audience mostly undemonstrative so far as the revue as a whole was concerned. However, it made up for its coolness toward the things supposing to have a particular eye-appeal by becoming happy and heated about the dancing of Will Mahoney, first of the featured offerings, others being William Demarest, who, like Mahoney, is among pleasant memories of vaudeville days; the Three Sailors, also of the late lamented variety stage; and what the programs proclaims to be "The World's Most Beautiful Girls."

BEAUTY NOT ENOUGH

Mr. Carroll's girlesque perhaps substantiates that boast but the audience evidently was not satisfied with beauty alone, since it was decidedly apathetic, for there was lack of novelty in most of the appearances of these pretty maidens, whose ensemble dancing appeared far below the standard expected of a big revue. To give them credit, however, it must be stated they clicked perceptibly in "The Broadway Limited," in which the sounds of shuffling and stamping feet gave the impression of a railway train in motion.

To get all the "knocks" off the anvil at once, consider the comedy skits, of which the better ones are stale, and the newer ones particularly unfunny, some of them plainly dirty, but with no Rabelaisian humor to laugh at.

MAHONEY EARNS PAY

Mr. Mahoney, as stated, gave the audience a lot for his share of the proceeds, and was the principal laugh creator, mixing funny falls with his adept tapping, as apparent one-sidedness tended to pull him off balance. For his every show of skilled footwork there was applause and for every seemingly discouraging tumble there was an uproar of laughter. He rounded out a busy evening, in which he alternated between his specialties and parts in unmomentous skits, with a demonstration on the "Mahoneyphone," a large xylophone, the hammers for which were his agile feet.

Mr. Demarest, who used to do a funny 'cello and comedy patter sketch in vaudeville, did not fare so well as Mahoney, through no fault of his own, as his talent was buried in the aforesaid skits.

THREE SAILORS CLICK

The Three Sailors registered with comedy acrobatics and dancing.

Another outstanding dancing feature was presented by Grace DuFaye, who exhibited supreme control in slow contortionistic movements. Another exceptional stepper was Omar, in whirlwind acrobatic exhibitions.

Gracie Worth, the Lovely Sisters, Dorothy Carroll and Don Howard attended to the vocalizing in a generally satisfactory manner although they did not have much material to do it with. Among the worthwhile spectacles was "Crashing the Golden Gate," sung by Miss Carroll, the finale of it as well as the first act being an unusual radium costume effect.

DISHES AWAIT SOAPY HAND WHILE WORM TURNS IN PITT

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Broken Dishes," an amusing comedy drama of family life, opened last night in the Pitt. It is Robert Fiske's show.

Mr. Fiske portrays a mild, henpecked husband. In fact, the character is pretty much of a boob. But Mr. Fiske does a good job of him. He makes him interesting and he creates sympathy for him.

Alice Ann Baker is quite in her element as a fretting, scolding wife and mother. She has just about stifled her family with the ever present shadow of an old sweetheart of hers. She has made her husband as meek as the proverbial lamb. She has turned two of her daughters into old-maid school teachers. But the younger daughter is a born rebel. She is going to live her own life; she marries the delivery boy.

AWAIT THE SOAPY HAND

It all begins over the supper table, with Mabel Krosman as one of the school-teaching daughters, getting most of the food. Then off to the picture show trots the mother and two daughters leaving the youngest and the father to wash the dishes. But for three acts those dishes sit on that table, waiting the touch of a soapy hand. And it is Alice Ann Baker's hand that touches them at the finale.

This all means that the worm—personified by Mr. Fiske—turns a flip-flop in the meantime. A jugful of hard cider is his inspiration. "My, my, my—those crabapples have an awful tang," he says, as he staggers into the parlor. And that parlor hadn't been open since Uncle Ned or somebody died!

Peggy Dougherty, who isn't new to the George Sharp troupe, has the heroine role. She does "right nicely," as her stage pa would say, and she certainly puts her ma in place with a big declamation in the last act.

WE SAY "MERRY CHRISTMAS"

John Thorn contributes an entertaining character bit in the role of a deaf, but not so dumb, parson. He certainly makes a grab for the dollar—for foreign missions, you know. Hugh Banks is present as the delivery boy Romeo. Paul McGrath, usually the hero, doesn't get the girl this week. A detective is on his trail so he exits through a window instead. Other players are John Winthrop, Katherine Maison and Chuck Webster.

The scenic setting is a living room, with five below registered without. Icicles are pasted to the window panes, but a fire that throws its rays 20 feet across the stage, dispels their "chill." And really it is all warm within—warm with a cheery sort of comedy that wins applause and has you wanting to shout "Merry Christmas" to the henpecked husband and the whole gosh-darn family.

Naughty

Claiborne Foster, whom we always have known as a nice girl, plays the lead in "Bad Girl," coming to the Alvin next week.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Decency Shouldn't Be Given Up to Prove Love

There's nothing new about Frank's line, as described in the letter which follows. Reading it, you may sneer and wonder why any girl should fall for such obvious, vicious selfishness. But an 18-year-old girl doesn't suspect. She hasn't learned how to, yet. She believes. She thinks her man has a right to ask. Sure he has a right to ask. Sure he "proves her love." She wonders, in pitiful confusion, if the ideas of right and wrong which her mother taught her are "all nonsense." And all too often, in her bewilderment, she wonders too long—and puts a lasting misery in her heart.

Wants Help

This story isn't "sob stuff" nor "yellow journalism." It's life as is—to many a shamed girl.

"Dear Miss Martin:

"Please help me. I beg of you. I am going mad. And I have no one else to tell my troubles to, and ask for help.

"Oh, yes, I have a mother. A wonderful, sweet mother. From whom I usually do ask advice. But I cannot tell her this problem . . . she would be horrified. So, because you seem to help people so much, I am coming to you.

"Please don't just throw my letter away, because I do need help so badly. I guess I am just plain dumb. What has been happening to me lately has never happened before, so I don't know what to do.

She Is Bewildered

"You see I am in love. And I never was in love before. My boy friend says that he loves me, too. But he wants me to do something that I don't think I should . . . I tell him I won't, he says I don't really love him. And I don't know what to do, Sally, because I do love him, truly I do.

"I am a good girl. Honestly I am, and I want to stay that way. Oh, what shall I do?

"Would I want to give him if I truly loved him, as he insists I would?

"I have told him to go away and never come back. I have even told him to get another girl with ideas different from mine. But he says that he can't, do that, because he loves me so. He says that it is because he loves me that he acts the way he does.

"I know he can't help being like he is. What shall I do? Shall I prove my love . . . or shall I send him away from me?

"Please help me, and don't be angry. I want to do the right thing, but I am so bewildered. I am only 18, and I guess I am terribly green. Only a fool. A lovesick fool. It's terrible to be like this. CASSIE."

Should you "prove your love?"

Why? How dare he doubt your love? How dare he ask you to throw away all your ideas of decency and strip your life of all happiness and security?

Deserves Contempt

Do you think that any man who really loves a girl, really wants to protect her, would ask that of her? Wouldn't he rather try in every way to prove his love, instead of demanding such a sacrifice from her?

Love isn't a grabbing game. It is founded on generosity and respect, and it is perfectly plain that this wriggly piece of fish-bait is entirely unacquainted with any such feelings. He is deliberately working on your feelings and your sympathy, and, if you have the sense God gave a goose, you'll treat him with the contempt he deserves.

As for your being in love with him . . . don't kid yourself! You may be ever so sorry for him . . . and ever so thrilled by his eyes, or his line, or the way he wears his clothes. But you're not in love with him. You're in love with love.

Throw him out, and slam the door on him! Then go out and find yourself a regular guy, worth loving.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Acne May Be Found an Inferiority Complex

DR. COPELAND

Acne is an inflammatory disease involving the glands of the skin. It is most frequently found on the face, but also it attacks the shoulders and back. It is extremely common and makes up about 70 per cent of all skin diseases.

Undoubtedly, this common skin disease has caused more distress than any other human ailment. The distress, of course, is not physical pain or disability, but it is the suffering due to the embarrassing disfigurement of the face.

We are all proud and most of us vain. Pimples are by no means conducive to a happy state of mind. This condition of the skin hurts the personal pride. No doubt it has marked the beginning of an inferiority complex that has spoiled many a career.

As a result of this attitude of mind, people suffering from acne have easily succumbed to quackery. Fake physicians and quack specialists quickly realized the susceptibility of these individuals. They have extracted much hard-earned money from such suffers.

Acne is most commonly seen between the ages of 15 and 25. If untreated or neglected during this time, it may become chronic. It was because of the common appearance of the disease at this time of life that it was believed to be due to some glandular influence. It was believed to be associated with the period of development into manhood or womanhood.

Dyspepsia and constipation play an important part in this disease. Anemia and general run-down condition may be associated with it.

The actual cause of acne is the formation of blackheads. These blackheads clog up the glands of the skin, produce irritation and inflammation of the skin. Following the inflammation, infection may take place and the condition reaches a stage known as "pustular acne."

In the care of acne the skin must be cleansed and kept free from all blackheads. This is best accomplished by scrubbing with warm water and soap twice daily.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of bathing. This removes the dirt and bacteria which may lead to infection and the formation of pustules. The bathing, too, reduces the excessive amount of fat present in the skin and tends to remove the greasy condition seen in most cases of acne. Green soap or castile soap is the best one to use.

The blackheads must be removed from the skin. This should be done after the face has been carefully cleansed with soap and water. Before using the black head extractor must be sterilized by boiling.

If pus forms, the pustules must be opened, preferably by a physician. Never squeeze a pimple. Serious results may follow careless procedure.

Acne is a stubborn condition and often taxes the most competent physician. You cannot cure this condition yourself, but there are many things you can do to help.

Requires More Courage to Be Decent Than Dissipated, Says Fay King

LIVING YOUR OWN LIFE" CAN ALSO MEAN PREFERRING A WORTHWHILE DECENT LIFE
YOU'RE NOT LIVING YOUR "OWN LIFE" AS YOU CALL IT. YOU ARE MERELY IMITATING A CERTAIN LOOSE CROWD
NO MATTER HOW BORED OR DISGUSTED SHE IS, SHE MUST APPROVE OF SOPHISTICATED SNOBS AND PARIES
TAT-TYC INC

By FAY KING

Today everyone wants to be considered "sophisticated."

No matter how bored or disgusted they may be by the "sophisticated" show or novel they must enthuse over it lest they be considered "unsophisticated."

The word "sophistication" comes from Sophist. The Sophists were teachers in ancient Greece, much disliked for their display, insincerity, trickery and deception.

To be sophisticated means "to be led astray by sophistic reasoning."

Sophistication is too often just another word, "smut," and the sophisticated are merely the dupes of the false, shallow clever-ness of nasty minds.

We hear so much about personality, individuality and independence, but most persons today are afraid to be themselves—if they are inclined to be decent.

Flat Tire May Upset Plans of Party Reaching Noel First

Harry Underwood kept his word. We "traveled" from the moment we saw Philip Veritzen's car keep straight ahead to the double boulevard instead of turning ahead of us into the road leading to the north shore of Long Island. Traffic was not very heavy after we made the turn from the bridge, and Mr. Underwood went through it with a magnificent disregard of signals, policemen and other cars, which made me shiver for the first few minutes of our journey. Then Dicky, who had been busying himself with pillows and blankets, slipped a compelling arm around me and drew my head against his shoulder.

"Now settle yourself comfortably, sweetheart," he said as he pulled the blankets around me. "Feet on the heater? That's right. Now shut your eyes and go to sleep. That's the only way you can keep from having hysterics over the way this bird is driving. He seems to think he's Lindy. I expect any second to see him lift this boat and soar right over a cop's head. But you can bank on one thing—his eyesight is good and he'll neither hit anybody nor get pinched. I'll promise you that."

"Thanks for the beet greens," Mr. Underwood drawled without turning his head. "But I can get along without any back-seat driving, favorable or otherwise, for the next hundred miles, Lady Fair. I assure you I will not harm one hair of your Titian locks, and the only chance you'll have of having your slumber disturbed is contingent upon the tires. If one goes the Dicky-bird will have to flop out of the cage. Otherwise he can tuck his head under his wing and snooze until we reach the farm."

"Big boy, ef yoh don' use yoh mouf less an' yoh eyes moh we won't reach no fahm dis night." Dicky chuckled as his friend gave a disgusted snort, but neither man said anything more, and it was but a few minutes before I was sound asleep against Dicky's shoulder, almost as comfortable as if I were in my bed at home.

I was so tired that I did not waken until I was conscious of Dicky stirring and lifting my head tenderly from his shoulder.

"Sorry to disturb you, dearest," he said, "but there's a tire gone, and I'll have to help old Harry."

I sat up with a jerk, my drowsiness banished by the rushing realization of what delay might mean to our errand.

"Oh, hurry!" I breathed, throwing aside the blankets. "Is there anything I can do—hand you things?"

I should have known better than to ask the question, for the wonderful lover-like tenderness which Dicky had given me ever since the drive began was shattered in an instant.

"Yes," he said crisply, with a disgusted intonation which brought the blood to my face, "there is. Sit still back here and keep your mouth shut. Here, tuck those blankets in. What do you want to do, get a chill and pneumonia?"

With the words he opened the door of the car and sprang to the ground. Harry Underwood was already at work with a jack, and the opening door brought to my ears the steady stream of profanity with which he was accompanying his labors. It was low-toned, however, and the slam which Dicky gave the door effectually shut out the objurgations.

I knew that both men were working at top speed and that in both their minds, as in mine, was the tense query, "Would this delay give Philip Veritzen the opportunity to reach the farmhouse if not before we did at least before we had the chance to spirit Noel away?" Harry Underwood's car is powerful, but it has not the costly engine which my employer's boasts. And while both Mr. Underwood's skillful driving and his knowledge of the wonderful, almost deserted, Middle Island road, gave him an advantage over the other car, it was not so great a one that this delay might not spell the difference between success and failure to our plans.

A look through both windows told me that we were somewhere on the Middle Island road, well past Smithtown, but just where I could not tell because of the darkness, although in daylight I know almost every inch of the road between the farmhouse and New York. A glance at the illuminated dial of my watch told me that we had made fairly good time if we were near the western end of the road, and remarkable progress if we were nearing the turn leading to Riverhead. But I determined to ask no questions until I was sure of Dicky's mood.

My watch ticked off the interminable seconds of waiting, but showed me that it was really an incredibly short time before the change of tires was accomplished. Knowing how easily Dicky is irritated when under a nervous tension such as we all were experiencing, I pretended to be asleep when he entered the car. And then I received another lesson in the little ways of exasperated masculinity.

"For the love of Lulu!" Dicky growled as he settled into the seat beside me. "Can you beat this, Harry? Sound asleep at the switch! Madge, wake up! Don't you know forty cars might have crashed into us while we were working over that time. Our tail-light isn't working."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, December 24

A very active state of affairs is presaged for the planetary operations in force on this day, but, with all the bustle and excitement, many annoying and disagreeable situations may be encountered. There is much opposition of both a business and private nature; and a tendency to turbulent and ill-governed acts and words may be expected to aggravate the generally unhappy conditions. Excessive pleasure seeking, extravagant indulgence but add to the confusion.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very lively year, but not a generally auspicious state of affairs. Personal leanings toward rash and impulsive words and deeds and to excessive indulgences and extravagances may aggravate the inharmony and confusion. But steadfast and laborious effort holds promise of friendly recognition and assistance.

A child born on this day may need early rigorous discipline in self-control, amiability, temperance and moderation lest it imperil its success.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

A Brave Letter

Dear Miss Beckman:

I am expecting a baby very soon. My husband and I have separated. We are friends, but we will never be husband and wife again. What name should I use in announcing the baby's birth? "Mrs. James Walter Sutton," "Mrs. Vera Hollister Sutton," or "Mrs. Hollister Sutton?"

Is it obligatory that announcements be sent?

READER.

Under the circumstances I urge you not to send out announcements. They are not necessary anyway, and quite naturally you would hesitate to send them in the usual form. The omission of the announcements needn't cause you a second thought, for this birth announcement is oftener omitted than sent.

And may I tell you, dear lady, of my friendliest wishes. Your letter is so brave, and this situation must be such a deeply difficult one. Blessings on you.

Addressing a Woman Separated From Her Husband

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The mother of the young man I go about with has been married twice. Her first husband is dead, and she is separated from her second husband. Shall I address her by her second marriage name, or by her maiden name? DOROTHY.

By her second marriage name. If she is only separated from her husband . . . not divorced . . . she will probably retain her formal name, the name of her second husband prefixed with Mrs.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Blonde dollies whose golden crowns have tarnished and darkened can give themselves white henna treatments. Take one cup of magnesium carbonate and mix with enough peroxide to form a paste the consistency of whipped cream, adding one-half teaspoonful of ammonia. Put onto the darkened roots, not on the ends of the hair. Watch carefully, scraping away the powder now and then to see if the hair is light enough. Ten minutes is usually long enough to let the pack remain on the head. Then shampoo.

Household Hints

Ribbons should be pressed on the wrong side to prevent shine.

Every so often instead of using soap and water on windows, try using a cloth dipped in ammonia and whiting and then polish with a chamois. They will sparkle.

If you have no electric toaster, housewife, save your pennies for one. It can be put on the breakfast table and each member of the family can tend to his or her own toast, leaving you time for other breakfast preparations.

The coffee pot must be kept sweet and clean if you want your coffee to continue to be good. About once a week put a tablespoonful of soda in the pot, fill nearly full with water and let boil for a short time. Then rinse well with boiling water.

When a woman no longer thinks about prettying up, making herself attractive, life has her beaten. She might as well get out her little ladder and climb up on the shelf. Cultivating beauty is like acquiring an education. It begins in childhood, and continues throughout all the years. One never gets to the end of the job, nor should one desire to, since a pleasing appearance is a gratification to one's self respect.

When a chin suddenly decidies to live a double life, it declares its mean intentions by showing up a faint crosswise line. That is the time to get busy and thwart it. The new chin will increase in fullness if permitted to go its way. By annointing with a heavy cream, picking up the flesh in tiny folds and rolling between fingers and thumb, the tissues will give up their idea of expansion. Ironing with ice makes it toe the mark. Astringents also discourage it.

One way to be beautiful in the eyes of a suitor is to urge him to tell what a great little feller he is. This is an old trick. Women have used it for countless ages. Men have fallen for it like three tons of coal going down a metal chute. Man is the sublimest work of nature, and the individual man one happens to run around with loves to believe that you realize that great biological fact. Making a man think one is beautiful is often easier than chasing after the beauty rainbow. All one needs is tact, intelligence, foresight, discretion and great wisdom.

Freed on Plea That Lawyer Absconded

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Dec. 23.—Matthews Mush, convicted under the narcotic act last January and sentenced to three years in the Western Penitentiary, was paroled yesterday by the Lawrence County Court, due to circumstances recited in his application for a parole.

The petition declared Mush posted $1,500 in cash with an attorney, who absconded with the money. Another claim for leniency was that he spent large sums in his trial, bringing his financial loss to more than $2,000.

CHORUS OF 60 ON RADIO TONIGHT

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

The Mendelssohn Glee Club of 60 voices sings on WCAE at 9:30 tonight. It will be the second time since 1866 that the group has given a public concert. Except for a few professional musicians the club is made up of business men who sing because they love it. "Love Me or Not" and "The Front King" are among the selections.

* * *

PART OF "PARSIFAL"

Howard Barlow has chosen a program which typifies the holiday spirit for WJAS at 9:30. The Pastoral Sinfonia from Handel's "Messiah" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Christmas Eve" suite will lead up in emotional intensity to the stirring strains of the Processional from Wagner's "Parsifal." This concluding number is part of the musical drama which describes the quest of the Knights of the Holy Grail for the sacred chalice used at the Last Supper.

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

Is Paul Oliver, the tenor, really Patrick Kelly, the announcer and ex-officio of daytime programs?

O. M.

Answer—Paul Oliver's real real name is Frank Munn. He and Kelly are good friends but not the same person.

* * *

"BY THE WAY—"

WGN, Chicago, has the Yuletide spirit . . . giving up time valued at $3,000 to broadcast Dickens' "Christmas Carol" in its entirety at 10 o'clock tonight and 11 o'clock tomorrow night . . . Arthur Allen plays the part of Scrooge in a dramatization of the story over WEAF-WGY at 7:30 tonight . . . NBC turned down a prospect with a $15,000 check in his hand because he was an undertaker . . . simply mortifying . . . The WEAF chain has a chime service from Trinity Church in New York tomorrow at 2 . . . Shanghai, Manila, Tokio and Honolulu are now in the KDKA Christmas plan . . . native music and greetings are to be brought from these cities via a short wave station at Point Reyes, Cal . . . another Christmas day feature is the broadcast of organ music over the WABC chain from 3:30 until 4 . . . Bobby Jones gives advice to golfers on WCAE starting Wednesday, January 14 . . . the Joseph Bandinos have a girl, Joan Rosalind . . . Buenos Aires is the origin of a New Year's Eve ramble over WABC and Columbia stations, including WJAS locally . . . Ben Bernie, Morton Downey, Howard Lanin, Fletcher Henderson, Jack Denny, Guy Lombardo and others are to appear in order—the party is to start at 10:30 . . . Eddie Guest, who holds the world's record for the greatest fan mail received in one broadcast (50,000), starts a new WJAS program January 4.

* * *

At the KDKA Christmas Party last night a certain short fellow (no names) standing under the mistletoe (in hopes) was told that he needed a soapbox more than the sprig.

* * *

"To see ourselves as ithers see us" was the purpose of a snappy film shown by Lloyd C. Thomas, depicting many of the radio stars at work and play.

Important Announcement

Discontinuing Our Shoe Repair Department!

As an accommodation service to our shoe customers, we recently opened a small shoe repair department in our Basement Annex. However, we find that this has worked an injustice to the shoemakers of Pittsburgh and vicinity, and therefore we consider it our duty to discontinue this department as of today.

Work already in our hands will be finished, but no new work will be accepted

The Store of Practical Christmas Gifts

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The outstanding lure to the armchairs, according to the overlords of the microphone, is a championship heavyweight fight, though not far behind in popularity are the football battles of Notre Dame, Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Army and, in recent years, the classic brawls of California.

The pawings of the lightweights, middleweights and all the other weights are just so much grist to the radio mills, but when the men mountains thread their way through the aisles to the arena the parlors from Bangor to San Diego cup their ears.

* * *

The vast and elaborate ballyhoo that precedes a heavyweight war has much to do, of course, with the national ear-straining that attends it. Yet were the attention-callers as silent as Coolidge's study, I still believe listeners would call off all other engagements on the night of the fight to seek the thrill of the event.

Certainly no other sport that is broadcast—and every sport is broadcast save hoop-rolling and croquet — possesses the drama and color of a meeting of the ring's big boys.

* * *

Were we to consult Dr. Freud we would probably learn the appeal of such occasions lies in their compensation for the cares of the day, the temporary forgetfulness that they bring of unpaid bills, of kitchen dishes, of even the origin of the next meal.

The radio Mussolinis are alert to the dramatic fascination of the heavyweight ring. They have had many obstacles to hurdle, chiefly the fear of fight promoters that the microphone was a menace to the turnstiles. Yet, they never raised their voices in anger. They have been suave and reasonable. At last they have convinced the comptrollers of the arena that there is no boogey man to fear, that even an ear-cupping of a heavyweight bout, provided it holds the promise of an even battle, cannot equal the thrill that is captured at the ringside.

* * *

It was the heavyweight championships that put over network broadcasting, that stirred the imagination of the country that made it possible for radio to take such firm hold of the imagination of the country. They are no longer essential to radio's success, but radio's public still derives its biggest kick from them. Six months will pass before another comes our way.

MAYOR TO HEAR NEW JOB AID PLAN

School Bond Issue Before Board

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfaff

William Pfaff

We bought one of the unemployed apples the other day and were well satisfied with the results. We aren't particularly susceptible to the apple, but we bought one in the hope that the apple man would tell us something we could print. This particular apple man was rather high-hat. He did, true enough, reveal that each crate contained 80 apples, but beyond that we learned not.

However, we got our nickel's worth. No sooner had we taken our first bite than we realized we were doing something for the unemployed. We walked down Sixth avenue munching a big apple and people looked. We felt that these people were saying, "That man is all right; he's doing his bit."

We felt like a public benefactor. We moved over to Fifth avenue where more people could see us. For five cents we derived more enjoyment than we have had since the war. Besides, it was a good apple.

* * *

Eight-year-old Hannah Rosenthal, the daughter of Max Rosenthal, of Beechview, has made her stage debut. In an amateur production, Hannah played the young lady from the gas-house district, and her costume was appropriate.

During the rehearsal the director yelled to her, "Hey, Gashouse, lean against that street lamp there."

"No," refused Miss Rosenthal, "I don't drink."

* * *

A few months ago we met a speakeasy bartender who happened to be strolling through the Lepidoptera section of Carnegie Museum and we talked about his racket. It was quite a coincidence that we met the same bartender in the same section yesterday and we talked again about his racket.

He has gone completely sour since last we met. He said the speakeasy was a racket from top to bottom. The bartenders tried to steal from the owner, the owner tried to double-cross his political superiors, the bootleggers tried to double-cross the owner and everybody tried to double-cross the customer.

He said a fellow was a sucker for drinking anything but gin, provided, of course, he drank at all. Speakeasy gin is cheaper and hasn't any more poison than the scotch or rye. He insisted the whisky sold over his bar came straight from Canada and wasn't cut but still was no good because it's young. They're selling it so fast in Canada that they don't give the stuff time to age, he explained. He said the joints are eager to cut the stuff today but that the stuff wouldn't stand cutting, and he longed for the good old days of four and five years ago when a fellow could take a case of good Overholt, mix it with alcohol and get three cases. Overholt was a good mixing whisky, he said, because it "spread."

The customers are wise to all these things, according to the bartender. In fact, he guessed that one-third of the town's speakeasies aren't making money. He said there aren't so many victims around these days who'll consistently pay 50 cents a shot for whisky. He rather admired them for this, too.

* * *

We do not like to be technical in these paragraphs, but in this case the condition cannot be avoided. It concerns what we have been told was the first wireless test in Pittsburgh, in 1893. Mr. Tom Caldwalder, of the East End, stood at Forbes and Bouquet streets, with a pair of bells in his hands. He pulled a lever, the bells clicked, and the action was repeated simultaneously on the stage of Carnegie Hall. Only persons acquainted in wireless will be able to appreciate this paragraph.

EARLY START ON ARSENAL HIGH SEEN

Plan $3,000,000 Flotation; Low Construction Bids For Building Approved

The Board of Education today was to receive recommendations for a bond issue of $3,000,000 and for the awarding of contracts amounting to $879,686 on the new Arsenal High School. The bond issue, to carry on the proposed building program of the board, will consist of 4½ per cent serial bonds.

The issue is recommended in an effort to speed up building projects planned for 1931, provided the board is able to agree on terms with the Electrical Contractors' Association of Pittsburgh, recently accused by the board members of "collusion to hold prices unreasonably high."

WOULD SPEED WORK

It is planned to begin work on the Arsenal Building as soon as possible, as a result of the recommendation last night of the finance and administration committee for the award of contracts to the lowest bidders. They were:

General contract, Pittsburgh Engineering Corporation, $689,446, with an additional $5,942 for metal doors and trim, and $1,000 for metal bookcases; John Graham Plumbing and Heating Company, heating and ventilating, $92,999; Moss and Blakeley Plumbing Company, plumbing, $47,999.

The contract for the electrical work was awarded in November to the Cronenweth Electric Company for $42,300, the only bidder for the job.

BRICK PLAN REJECTED

Last night's meeting voted down the motion of President Marcus Aaron that the Arsenal school be constructed of brick, which would afford employment to bricklayers. James Bonar, building superintendent, opposed the motion, explaining that the difference in employment would be slight, and that the price of limestone, previously selected for the building, is now lower than at any time in the past.

The building, to be erected at Butler and Thirty-ninth streets, will cost $1,000,000, including the cost of the playground.

Plans for the five-room school on the Mellon site at Phillips and Murray avenues were approved.

GIRL ELOPER, 16, GETS DIVORCE

The marriage of Margaret Phillips, 16, high school student, 1370 Woodlawn avenue, Wilkinsburg, who eloped with Thomas W. Phillips, 23, Laketon road, Penn Township, in April last, and testified he coerced her into keeping it a secret, was dissolved by a decree in divorce by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen in Common Pleas Court.

They ran away to Wellsburg, W. Va., April 19 last, and returned to their home, she testified, and said he was afraid his parents would not maintain him if they learned of the marriage and enjoined her to secrecy. Once while riding in his automobile he threatened to throw her over a cliff if she told her parents, she said. He called on her at her home until August 15 last, when they parted, she testified.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BURBANK, Cal., Dec. 23.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

A right brand new senator from North Carolina, named Morrison, jumped up before he had even been in the place long enough to talk over prices and deliveries for his Christmas stuff with the other senators. They have an unwritten law there that a new member is not allowed to say anything when he first gets in, and another written law that whatever he says afterwards is not to amount to anything. Another senator was denouncing a great friend of Morrison's, from his own state, and Morrison defended him. He didn't know that denouncing was a senator's sole life's work. He took it serious.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

COUNCIL PLANS TO IMPROVE MARKETS

Diamond to be Modernized With Exterior Display Windows, Shifted Stalls

Modernization of the Diamond markets with plate glass display windows, heavier power and electric lines and a rearranged interior, appears to be in the offing, it was disclosed to Council yesterday.

Richard Neff, city architect, has completed plans for the market whereby a number of plate glass windows will be erected on the exteriors and the various stalls rearranged along with a number of other improvements.

Councilman W. Y. English said renters of space in the market are enthusiastic about the plan and have agreed to stand a 20 per cent increase in rentals because of the proposed improved facilities. Present revenue to the city is $57,500, it was said. Cost of the work would be approximately $40,000.

Under the new plan, however, renters will pay for their own electricity and refrigeration. Power lines to carry the heavier loads will be furnished by the city.

Action is expected soon on the project, it was pointed out.

4 SUITS ASKS $155,000

Harry M. McCabe, seeking to recover $60,000 damages for injuries to his minor daughter, Jeanne McCabe, in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court against the Pittsburgh Railways Company, averred they were due to a street car running through a red traffic signal, striking an automobile in which the girl was riding.

Pauline Moloney, of Milred street, Crafton, asked $50,000 for injuries in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court against the Yellow Cab Company and C. P. Williams.

Eugene Pasquale, former driver for the Nevins Bus Line, Inc., filed a suit for $25,000 damages in Federal Court against the company, for injuries he said he received in an accident June 30, 1929.

Mary B. Sadler, of Mt. Oliver, in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court, asked $20,000 damages from the City of Pittsburgh. She said she sustained serious injury in falling into a hole in a dirt walk on St. Joseph street, Mt. Oliver.

FUND WOULD DO PUBLIC WORK

Proposal Made to Council For Extra Care of City Property With Cash Gifts

The plan to create an unemployment fund with voluntary contributions from citizens, as outlined by an unnamed attorney and presented to Council yesterday by President John S. Herron, will receive further impetus following a conference with Mayor Kline by members of that body.

Councilman W. Y. English seconded Herron's proposal and it passed unanimously. The suggestion was made, however, that Council confer with the executive before taking further action.

CONTRIBUTION LIKELY

Council will probably donate to the fund, should the plan reach fruition.

The contributions, it was said, would create a fund to be spent on odd jobs in parks, on the city streets, bridges, and public buildings not otherwise provided for in the 1931 budget. The city treasurer would handle the money and pay wages without waiting for the regular pay days set for city employes. In no way, it has been pointed out, would the relief plan conflict with any methods now in use to aid the needy and those out of work.

WOULD EMPLOY WOMEN

Women who are heads of families would be employed in city institutions as cleaners and in making and repairing clothing for inmates of charitable institutions according to the plan.

New York City now has such a provision for the unemployed, known as the "Six Million Dollar Fund," to which John D. Rockefeller, Sr. and Jr., recently donated $1,000,000, the unnamed attorney is said to have told Herron.

GIFTS FOR BOYS AT BANQUET

Score of gifts will be presented bdys attending the father and son banquet of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce Monday night in the chamber dining room. Two hundred reservations have been made, it was announced.

According to Dan T. Felix, committee chairman, there will be a program of entertainment. Each boy will receive gifts contributed by business firms.

BISHOP TO HEAD RETREAT MEET

The fourth annual conference of the laymen's retreat movement of the United States and Canada will take place at St. Vincent Archabbey, Latrobe, January 9, 10 and 11. It will be under the patronage of the Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh district. A banquet will be held in the William Penn Hotel on the evening of January 11, at which more than 1,000 men are expected to attend.

SEIZED LIQUOR CONDEMNED

Three hundred gallons of alcohol and 60 quarts of whisky seized November 7 in the office of the American Railways Express Company, Water street, was condemned as forfeited to the government by Judge Nelson McVicar. The court directed that the alcohol be turned over to government agencies for manufacturing or scientific purposes and the whisky be destroyed. The contraband had been shipped from Philadelphia.

'Ad' Club Stages Christmas Party

POLICE SEEK 2 IN HOLDUPS

Search was being made by police today for thugs who staged two holdups, one on Herron Hill and the other in the East End last night.

Nathan Duicker was alone in his grocery at 900 Anaheim street when an armed Negro walked in, forced him into the rear room and rifled his pockets of $75. Police scoured the neighborhood after the robbery, but found no trace of the thug.

Ralph Nolan, of 7614 Brashear street, was robbed of $32 by a highwayman who accosted him in Richland lane, near Penn avenue. Pointing a revolver, the thug ordered Nolan to hand over his money.

H. H. Billetter reported to police that shortly after midnight his home had been entered and $18 and a watch, valued at $25, were stolen. Entrance was gained through a rear window.

URGE CITY KEEP MEN AT WORK

Suggesting that the city continue to pay standard wages to employes, refrain from discharging any workers, and carry out all necessary improvement projects in the coming months, a letter stressing employment relief was received by City Council yesterday from the Pittsburgh Federation of Social Agencies.

Because the present employment crisis is "one that might remain with us for several months," according to the letter, received by President John S. Herron, the agencies recommended immediate action.

The letter was referred to the committee on finance.

Showdown on Showboat Ban Sought From Mayor

Capt. J. W. Menke, owner of the showboat Goldenrod today was to ask Mayor Charles H. Kline either to sign a permit that was prepared by E. G. Lang, director of public works, giving permission to stage shows on the boat at the foot of Stanwix street, or tell him why the permit is held up.

Capt. Menke secured a public safety permit and was to have opened his shows last Wednesday. Then Lang held up the opening by telling Menke a public works permit was necessary. Lang wrote out the permit and Menke prepared to give shows late in the week. Again he was held up because Kline had not signed on the dotted line.

Lang also said the bureau of building inspection must go over the boat to make sure of its safety. Menke says he has seen no inspectors, and that today he was going to find out, if possible, why the wheels of city business are spragged against his boat and show.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE REVEALS NEW TRADE STUDY

BODY WORKING TO DEVELOP BIG AREA

Seek to Attract Business From Allegheny Tableland, Former Baltimore Market

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce today made known the study a representative committee is making of the ways and means to foster reciprocal social, educational and business relationship between this city and the 680,000 residents of the Allegheny Tablelands, the area stretching from Pennsylvania into Maryland and West Virginia, 160 miles southwest of Pittsburgh.

Frank Shaffer, manager of the natural resources division of the chamber, said the local chamber is working in conjunction with the recently formed Allegheny Tableland Association, of which Shaffer and Joseph T. Miller are officials. The Pittsburgh chamber will add in the development of the area which embraces a total of 1,750,000 acres.

It is hoped to develop the tablelands agriculturally and as a resort and vacation center for Pittsburghers, and thereby attract the more than a half million potential consumers to Pittsburgh markets and educational institutions.

Shaffer stated that this territory originally was a market for Baltimore goods. Although it was closer to Pittsburgh, the train service was better to Baltimore, and many Baltimore residents spend their summers in the resorts in the tableland district.

Shaffer believes the time is now ripe to develop this region as a Pittsburgh territory. There are 400,000 agriculturists among the population there and it would take comparatively little time for them to motor into Pittsburgh to do their buying. A report of the chamber's study will not likely be available for a month at least, Shaffer said.

OAKLAND RAID BRINGS FLIGHT OVER ROOFS

Dry Agents Rout Patrons; Alleged Bartender Held; Other Seizures Reported

A half-dozen patrons in a second-floor club at 112 Boquet street fled over roofs of adjoining buildings when prohibition agents invaded the place yesterday, it was reported.

The patrons rushed for the windows when William H. Dunn, 47, alleged bartender, opened the door on the first floor, agents said. Confiscation of 75 pints of whisky, several gallons of gin was reported. Dunn was held in $2,000 bond.

TWO SEIZED IN RAID

James Fox, 60, and Leonard Nardi, 19, were arrested in a raid on a building at 2512 West Liberty avenue, where, agents said, seizures of gin, moonshine and home brew were made.

In a building at 111 Penn avenue, Turtle Creek, a gallon of moonshine was found and Stanley Slec, 34, arrested, according to the agents. William L. Judge, 37, was arrested when his home in Provost road, Baldwin Township, yielded the raiders six quarts of gin and two barrels of beer, they reported.

STILLS FOUND

A 40-gallon still found on the third floor of a building at 109 Watkins avenue, Wilmerding, led to the arrest of Attilio Peccora, 38; Frank Sala, 19, and Antoinette Peccora, 29, agents declared.

Accused of operating an illicit still, Kasimir Karpinski, 45, of 39 River avenue, Natrona, is to be given a hearing before Justice of the Peace J. Francis Heck at Natrona tonight. Police Chief Paul Engleman and raiding officers say they raided the Karpinski home yesterday and seized a 20-gallon still, four gallons of moonshine whisky and 100 gallons of mash.

TAX PAYMENTS END DEFICIT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Collection of $73,637,357 in income tax on December 19 shifted the condition of the Treasury from a deficit of $16,740,646 on the preceding day to a surplus of $47,719,552.

While the surplus is likely to fade away again after the first of the year the deficit, which has held sway since last September, was wiped out by collection of the last quarter's payment of tax on 1929 incomes, the quarterly financing of the Treasury which brought $425,000,000 from sale of certificates and war debt payments by foreign countries.

The last Treasury statement for December 19 showed for the month $440,932,489 had been collected from income taxes as compared with $471,188,311 in the same number of days last year. For the fiscal year, starting July 1, income tax receipts amounted to $1,051,418,275 compared with $1,140,008,471 in the same period of the previous year.

URGE NEW POOL FILTER DEVICES

Recommendations that chlorination and filtration plants be installed in 14 of the city's swimming pools before next season opens, because of saving of water and lessening of disease possibilities, were made in a joint report yesterday to Council.

The report was filed jointly by the Departments of Public Works and Health. It was estimated total cost would be $38,000. Supervision of the plants would be placed under the direction of the Health Department, with no increase in personnel necessary.

Tests showed, according to the report, that bacteria was greatly reduced and water has to be changed half as often when the plants are used.

The pools include Henry W. Oliver, Arlington, Homewood, Keimond, Leslie, Olympia, Ormsby, Phillips, Schenley, Sheraden, Lake Elizabeth, Roberta Lang, Riverview and Troy Hill. Six city pools are now equipped. The estimated saving to the city would be $10,000 annually.

TOPOGRAPHICAL SURVEY UNDER FIRE AT BUDGET MEET

MAPS USEFUL, ENGINEERS TESTIFY

Committee Quizzes Experts On Projects Value to City; Cost $350,000 to Date

An answer to the Councilmanic question as to how long a time will be required before the Topographical Survey of the city can be completed was expected today from U. N. Arthur, of the Bureau of Surveys, when he appears before that body's budgeting committee.

Called before the group during budgeting activities yesterday, Arthur explained that the work was three-fifths done and that it could be finished in three years at the present rate of progress. A portion of the county has also been surveyed, Arthur said. The county is supposed to have an agreement with the city for the work.

SURVEY COSTLY

However, an examination of the county budget shows no appropriation for this project, although the city sets aside $25,000 yearly as its share. Several members of Council are opposing the continuation of the survey on the grounds that it has been of no use to the city engineers in working out their problems. Extending over six years, councilmen said, the survey has, so far, cost $350,000.

Before Arthur's testimony Councilman W. Y. English, who presided at the meeting, ordered that Public Works Director Edward G. Lang, Engineers Tom M. Reed, Charles M. Reppert and F. B. Chalfant appear to tell whether the survey was of any use.

Herron asked Reppert:

"Do you think Mr. Arthur's maps on the topographical survey are accurate?"

Reppert replied:

"Absolutely!"

Herron said:

"In that case you think it is a good thing for us to continue the survey."

Reppert replied:

"Yes, I do. If we dropped it now we would be making a big mistake in our plans for city development."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Miss Tucker Makes Bow At Lunch

Before reverting to that always delightful topic, clothes, and particularly the lovely evening gowns I saw at the theaters last night, I want to chat about another debutante of Christmas week.

Ellinor Hilliard Tucker, daughter of the Richard B. Tuckers, of Morewood avenue, is being presented today at a luncheon her mother is giving in the Twentieth Century Club. Mrs. Tucker is unable, however, to attend the event. Receiving with the debutante are Mrs. Frederic T. Billings, Jr., and Mrs. Frank B. Gordon.

Covers are laid for 50 with the guests including debutantes of the season. Miniature Christmas trees and silver leaves decorate the tables. The debutante is wearing a sophisticated gown of black crepe and cloth of silver.

* * *

Today Mrs. Benjamin Dangerfield is giving a luncheon in honour of her daughter, Katharine, in their home in Beacon street. The guest of honor is wearing a gown of black crepe, in princess mode, with long sleeves. The decorations are silver and green, suggestive of the Christmas season.

* * *

Another party is planned for the school set, a dinner, to be followed by dancing, which the Stewart Johnstons, of Highland avenue, will give Saturday night in the Pittsburgh Golf Club for their nephew Frank Semple Bissell, son of Mrs. George W. Jackson Bissell. Mr. Bissell is home for the holidays from the Hill School.

Jane Sloan, a debutante of the past winter, who heads the committee of girls who'll usher at performance of "The Blue and Gray" to be given by Williams' College Cap and Bells Club, Monday night, in the Twentieth Century Club, will entertain with a dinner before the play in the clubhouse in honor of the cast and girls who'll assist her. Jane is chairman of ushers.

Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book" at the Alvin attracted many folks last night. Helen Leovy was there, wearing shell pink moire with a wrap of black velvet, and Mrs. R. Kent Hanson, wearing a lovely gown of afterglow crepe, with novel bows outlining the decolletage, was chatting with the Gordon Kings. Mrs. King looked exquisite in a gown of pistachio green crepe, having long sleeves, terminating at the wrists in a bell effect, edged with dyed ermine. Her wrap was of black velvet and ermine.

Theaters Attract

As they entered the theater I saw the James Francis Burkes, and Mrs. Burke looked stately in royal blue satin and an ermine coat. The David I. McCahills were among the audience, and Mrs. McCahill wore an afternoon dress of black georgette with a coat of green broadcloth and mink. Mrs. Carl A. Miller chose black chiffon velvet with a wrap of black velvet and ermine. I also noticed Mrs. George Wilbert III and Mrs. Karl W. Warmcastle, who chose a gown of purple crepe and an ermine coat.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Matthews chose gold lame for her gown, and a mink wrap. I caught a glimpse of Rosamound Fitch in a mink coat. Caroline and Loraine Taylor were there, and Caroline chose black tulle with rows of black sequins around the skirt. Loraine wore black satin with rhinestones outlining the V-decolletage.

Lovely Gowns

Ruth Kohne wore a stunning gown of deep garnet red crepe with a fingertip jacket of black velvet furred with ermine.

On leaving the theater I caught a glimpse of Louise Vilsack in tangerine lace with a black velvet wrap, chatting with Mrs. Elmer Whitehall, in lame and black velvet, and Mrs. Carl Vilsack, who had chosen wisteria lace for her costume, with a black velvet and chinchilla wrap.

* * *

Mrs. Fiske attracted many folks to the Nixon even though everyone's engrossed in family plans these last few days before Christmas.

Mrs. Jack Bissell was there, wearing a black chiffon velvet gown with a girdle of rhinestones. Her wrap was of coral velvet with collar and cuffs of white hare.

Sitting in a box were the J. Shirley Austins and the Sidney A. Stewarts. Mrs. Stewart chose black velvet, and Mrs. Austin, seafoam green satin and silver.

Last night Hester Harton Browne, debutante daughter of the Richard Hollyday Semples, made her formal bow at a ball given by the Semples in the Pittsburgh Club. Mrs. George C. Wilson, Jr., of Cathedral Mansions, and Mrs. Thomas J. McKay, of Morewood avenue, entertained with a dinner last night for Maria Wilson and Lawrence McKay. Yesterday Mrs. William Harrison MacAfee and her daughter Jane entertained with a luncheon in the MacAfee home. Jane wore white taffeta and ermine, and her mother French blue lace. Women Form New Travel League

A new unit of the University Travel League to be known as the Metropolitan Chapter has been organized by business and clubwomen and officers will be elected and installed on January 8 at a meeting in Carnegie Library, Schenley Park. Dr. Robert Lee Jones, of the University of Pittsburgh, will be forum director for the new chapter, which is to meet semi-monthly.

The League is a national organization with chapters throughout the country. It is an adult educational movement, and is the outgrowth of the most modern innovation in college education, which had its origin in September, 1926, when the Steamer Ryndam sailed from New York on a voyage around the world with a passenger list made up of 500 carefully selected students, matriculants of the world's first "floating university."

Lectures prepared by outstanding university professors are discussed in forum at the regular meetings and through this travel study the equivalent of two years of college training is given to the members. Dr. N. Andrew N. Cleven, of the University of Pittsburgh, is a member of the lecture staff, which includes Dean Alfred Powers, of Oregon University; John Clark Archer, of Yale; Richard M. Field and J. W. Pomphret, of Princeton; Carel Smit, of Brown; Dr. William Manger, of Georgetown; Ashton Sanborn, Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and may others.

Clubs that are making a study of Mexico will be interested in the announcement made at Carnegie Institute concerning the exhibition of Mexican arts.

During the exhibition (January 8 to February 4) Count Rene d'Harnoncourt will lecture to special groups, covering all phases of Mexican fine and applied arts, of which there will be many notable examples in the exhibition.

Count d'Harnoncourt is a member of a distinguished Austrian family. He spent some years in Mexico studying the art of the country. When Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts, Carnegie Institute, visited Mexico City a year ago for the purpose of planning and assembling the present exhibition, Count d'Harnoncourt was recommended to him by Ambassador Morrow as the person to collect the exhibits, and to have charge of the exhibition in the United States. Count d'Harnoncourt made the illustrations for Mrs. Dwight Morrow's book, "The Painted Pig."

In her talk on "The Origin and Development of Carols" before the Homestead Woman's Club yesterday, Mrs. R. L. Finlayson defined a carol as "a bright song expressing some joyous emotion." These, with folk songs, tell the history of a nation, Mrs. Finlayson said, as she went on to discuss carols. A sextet of club members, Mrs. Richard Moon, Mrs. W. B. Hartley, Mrs. W. B. Nebo, Mrs. W. J. Quilley, Mrs. Homer Everett and Mrs. Herbert McDonald, sang a number of carols and there was also assembly caroling.

TUNIC FASHIONABLE SCHEME FOR VARYING THE ENSEMBLE

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

PARIS, Dec. 23. — Just when the afternoon ensemble was casting about for a new and subtle idea, along came the tunic to vary this type of costume. If an ensemble is required, what is more charming and sensible than a tunic over a skirt that matches the ensemble coat and a good looking suit? These tunics have found great favor and it would not be surprising to find this style carried well into spring in lighter materials and colorings. As it is, such an ensemble gives a spring-like touch to the dreariest winter day and is a most useful costume as well. Black with blue is particularly liked just now and one sees ever so many women wearing this combination with accessories to match. We have spoken of the importance and prominence of the black and blue hat and we learn that women everywhere are enthusiastic over it. The black and blue frock is finding much favor, and such delicate tones as aquamarine and turquoise have no doubt had much to do with the demand for black and blue clothes.

* * *

* * *

THE OTHER SKETCH depicts the accompanying coat. It is a most graceful garment with its triple cape effect and set on to a round shoulder yoke. The collar is gray fox.

Santa Busy Handling Mail at Santa Claus

James Martin, postmaster, reports that the mail this year is 10 times heavier than last, most of which he attributes to the publicity given him last year by Robert L. Ripley, creator of the "Believe It or Not" cartoons.

He said:

"I couldn't handle the Christmas mail if it weren't for the willingness of the folks who live here to light in and help.

"Everybody has all the work he can do, too, though the pay is only the satisfaction that the people of the country will be made happier by getting their gifts from 'Santa Claus.'"

MEINE MAY RETURN TO BUCCANEERS

EVEN AS THEY shape up on paper at present, the Pittsburgh baseball club's pitchers for 1931 form an impressive array, and one that holds out a lot of promise. There is every prospect that Manager Jewel Ens will not only have a dependable string of starting hurlers but that he will have a greater number of capable reserve slabmen than the average pilot. And it is probable that the staff will be even stronger by the time the season opens, for it develops that there is a strong chance of a helpful addition being made to the corps through a comeback on the part of Heinie Meine.

Heinie Meine

That this right-hander may return to the Pirates next year is the pleasing news that comes from the St. Louis district, where the pitcher resides. Heinie left the Buccaneers during the 1930 race in the belief that he was in danger of a break-down in health, but friends say that he has found that his fears were groundless, that he has mended steadily, and that the outlook is so favorable for his complete recovery that he is planning to rejoin the Corsairs in the spring.

THE PIRATE MANAGEMENT, of course, will be glad to welcome Meine back into the fold. There was no trouble between the pitcher and the club, the sole reason for Heinie's departure being that he felt his physical condition demanded an immediate rest. His case was not one of suspension, as he was merely placed on the voluntarily retired list, so that his reinstatement in the event he desires to pitch again will be nothing more than a formality.

Meine will help the Bucs not a little if he comes back. He did not get a fair chance to show last season, as he was handicapped by illness from the start of the season, when an attack of tonsillitis prevented him from pitching the opening game. In working trim he is a smart, capable flinger, and even if he is not used as a starter as often as some of the others, should he return, he will be a decidedly handy man to have on the available list.

RECENTLY A SYNDICATE writer commented on the strength of the Pirate firing squad and quoted a major league manager as having said that in Kremer, Brame, Wood, French, Swetonic, Grant, Willoughby and Bednar the Bucs had a pitching staff potentially the strongest in baseball.

And at that the article did not cover the ground thoroughly. Aside from the possibility of Meine being added, it will be observed that another mound asset has been overlooked entirely in the person of Glenn Spencer.

Glenn Spencer

AND THERE'S A pretty fair right-hander whom any manager in either of the major leagues would be glad to own. An injured leg slowed him down last season just as he was swinging into a brilliant stride, but at that he won eight games against nine defeats and saved a number of engagements for other pitchers by splendid relief work. He looks like a real pitcher who has a good chance to establish himself as a regular in 1931. No pitcher in the league won more games than Kremer this year and only one, Pat Malone, won as many. Wood has all the earmarks of a coming star; the ability of Brame and French is well known; Swetonic, with his health regained and stronger and heavier than ever, is in line for his best year; Bednar is a fine prospect, and with the chucking crew also including Grant, Willoughby and others the Pirate pitching situation leaves just about nothing to be desired.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL contracts contain a clause prohibiting the player from engaging in athletic pastimes during the off-season without the written consent of the president of his club. But the St. Louis American League club found a better way to induce Jimmy Levey, local athlete, to give up the football he was playing until recently as a halfback for the Majestics, West Penn Conference champions.

Learning of Levey's gridiron activities in this section, and fearing that an injury might upset the plans of the Brown management to make him the regular shortstop next year, the St. Louis club urged Jimmy to give up football, adding that if he played it only because he needed the money he could earn thereby the Brown officials would gladly get him a job in the Mound City. So Levey threw away his cleated shoes, went to St. Louis, found a nice job awaiting him and is all set for the winter.

EDDIE ROUSH will not be the only Giant seeking to hawk his own services this winter. Another member of the club who has been given permission to sell himself to any buyer he can find is Joe Genewich, right-hand pitcher, who dropped out about the middle of last season on account of an ailing arm.

Joe Genewich

Genewich has been undergoing a course of treatment and is hopeful that he will be able to stage a successful comeback next season, but the Giant management evidently does not share his confidence and has told the pitcher he is at liberty to sell his services to any club with which he can make satisfactory terms. Genewich won only three games in 1929 and was a total loss last season.

THE PROPOSAL OF President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University, that an attempt be made to solve the problem of football overemphasis by forming an academic league of nations, having all college sports endowed by the alumni and making all games free to the public is commendable in theory, but from several angles there is a lack of even reasonable assurance that it is practical. For one thing, the size of the endowment that would be necessary is staggering. A few of the larger and older schools might be able to put it over, but for the younger colleges, with small alumni bodies, there would not be a chance.

AND IF THESE had to give up football, or play it to free gates they would, lacking the required endowment, be forced to abandon all other branches of athletics for the students, as well. Many of the critics who bemoan football's huge profits continue to overlook the fact that if it were not for those profits no other college sports could exist.

The gridiron game must furnish the upkeep for other branches of athletics that are conducted at a financial loss. President Butler's plan might work out for a few, but for many it would mean the giving up of everything in the sports line.

A GLANCE AT the Army's football schedule for next year shows that Pittsburgh will be one of only three cities privileged to see the

Hobart Retains Bohren as Coach

GENEVA, N. Y., Dec. 22.—(INS.)—Karl Bohren, former University of Pittsburgh star, has received and accepted a contract to remain as coach of the Hobart College football team next season, it was announced today by President Murray Bartlett.

Bartlett made the announcement to contradict reports that Harlan Carr or Roy Simmons, former Syracuse stars, were being considered for the post of director of athletics and football coach.

LOCAL HOCKEY CLUB BEGINS HOME STAND

A SPORTS DRAMA
BY
CARL W. SHATTO.

Title: The Hockey Game.
Scene: Duquesne Garden.
Time: 8:30 tonight.

ACT I.

Program Vendor: Get a program! Get a program! How arya going to be able to identify these graybeards without a program?

Little Fan: Papa, who are the graybeards the man is talking about?

Big Fan: They are the Yellow Jackets. You were just a little shaver and they were young fellows the last time they played a hockey game here, weeks ago.

Ticket Taker: Get in line there! Whatsa idea of trying to clog up the entrance?

First Fan: I haven't been out here for so long that I have forgotten how you go about getting in.

Program Vendor: Get a program! Get a program! How arya going to know these graybeards without a program?

Fair Fanette: The old Garden hasn't changed much, has it?

Fan No. 1,604 (seated): Here come the Yellow Jackets.

TEAM TRAVEL WORN

Another Fan: Who is that man with the long whiskers?

Fan in on pass: That's Tory Gregg, captain of the local team. He was an ambitious young fellow the last time they played here.

Another Fan: And that gent with the wrinkled face, and the one with the bald head?

Fan in on pass: The wrinkled old campaigner is Art Bertlett, and the one with the shiny pate is Whitey Fields, who used to have a nice thatch of blond hair. They've been on the road for weeks, and are travel worn, I guess.

Program Vendor: Get a program! Get a program! How can you hope to identify these graybeards without a program?

Second Fan: Sure. Know who they are? That's Roger Smith and that's Tex White, former amateur Yellow Jackets and pro Pirates here, recently purchased from Philadelphia. They're making their first appearance here as International Leaguers tonight, but all the local fans know 'em.

Fair Fanette: The who?

Fan No. 636: The Windsor skaters; that's what they call 'em. They're in second place, and have scored more goals than any other team in the league except Cleveland. Pittsburgh beat 'em and tied 'em in the two previous battles, however, and I guess they can do it again.

CAN PASS LONDON

Fair Fanette: What are they playing for?

Fan No. 637: Well, if the Jackets win they will pass London and go into fifth place in the standings. They play their next four games at home and they hope to start a winning streak tonight.

Fan No. 636: And they may do it. Duke McCurry and Gordy Fraser are just about recovered from their injuries, and may get back in the game tonight.

Program Vender: Get a program! Get a program! How arya going to identify these graybeards without a program?

Fair Fanette: My, what a crowd!

Her Admirer: Sure, Roy D. Schooley is running this team, and the local fans know that he always has produced a winner. That group over there is made up of disabled war veterans from the Marine Hospital, who are here as guests of the club.

First Fan: Here comes the referee.

Enthusiastic Fan: Let's go!

SECTIONAL GRID TEAMS DRILL

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—King Football has moved to Southern California for his last stand of the year, but another king, the well-known winter, gave him a chilly rebuke yesterday and made some 75 cohorts of the gridiron wonder whether the Sunny Southland was as pictured.

Within a few hours trains brought to Los Angeles 34 University of North Dakota players, 25 Washington State men and 16 former football stars of Notre Dame, all ready for intersectional games.

But while the sun shone, winter descended from the mountains with overcoat-producing weather. Temperatures ranged from 25 to 40 degrees.

TEAMS DRILL

Later in the day leather began to fly on football fields as if it were September instead of December. North Dakota worked out in the Coliseum for the game on Christmas Day with the Los Angeles Firemen.

Washington State, getting acclimated for the New Year's Day battle with Alabama, in the Rose Bowl, at Pasadena, took over the nearby Tournament Park. The All-Stars, minus Knute Rockne, scrimmaged for the game Saturday with the stellar recruits which Jimmy Phelan, Washington coach, has gathered from the West, South and North.

RELAYS ABANDONED

ATLANTA, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The Tech relays, annual attraction for hundreds of athletes from the South, and some from other sections, will be abandoned in 1931, athletic officials of Georgia Tech, have announced.

Hazleton Honors Cadet Stecker This Week

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Cadet Ray Stecker will be just a member of the corps of the Military Academy until this afternoon. Then for nine days he will be the lion of Hazleton, Pa.

Stecker, outstanding ball carrier in Army's late season football campaign, ran 57 yards to beat Navy and contributed the points that beat Illinois. He has a nine-day furlough and his home town will honor him, topping the celebration with a Chamber of Commerce banquet Saturday night.

PEABODY TOPS WILKINSBURG

High school basketball teams had another dose of competition yesterday, with several interesting contests ensuing.

Peabody High came through to trip the Wilkinsburg quint, 18 to 13, in a nip-and-tuck battle which showed fight from the opening whistle.

Central Catholic High School's courtmen set down Aspinwall High, 18 to 12, in another good exhibition.

SCHOOL COACH WEDS

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Dec. 23.—Announcement was made here yesterday of the marriage of Albert Black, athletic coach at Blacksville High School and former prominent Amherst Collegt athlete, to Miss Charlotte Stephens, of Waynesburg. The ceremony occurred June 6, 1930, at Cumberland, Md., but was not announced until now.

WEST PENN CUP TILTS CARDED

BY TOM BIRKS

After a couple of weeks of hard-fought battles in the various soccer leagues, the third-round games of the Western Pennsylvania Senior Cup will get the attention of soccer followers on Christmas Day. It is the usual procedure to schedule cup tie games on holidays, for the fans seem to appreciate the elimination battles.

Three games are scheduled. The big battle will be staged at Dunlevy, where Morgan meets George Grandy's club. The writer has seen 10,000 fans packed into the Dunlevy enclosure on a holiday and Manager Williams is looking for a banner crowd.

Morgan had a tough battle Sunday in the Keystone League, just nosing out Curry. Dunlevy was idle and that has afforded the players a good rest prior to the fray. Morgan is the only undefeated club in the district.

BANGER ILL

Manager Howard Mangus, of Morgan, will hardly make the trip up the river. Banger has been laid up with sickness, and Fred Donnelli has been running the Miller's Run club in his absence.

At Bridgeville, the Pittsburgh Rovers meet the locals. The Rovers have a fine reputation in the West Penn. In the old days, when McGill and his gang played, the Rovers always could be counted upon to reach the final. While they have not been setting the world on fire in the Central League, they are apt to upset Bridgeville.

A third game finds Crafton and Clan Douglas clashing at Crafton. Seeing that the Wright team swamped the Rovers last Saturday, and the Celtics handed Douglas its first defeat of the season, there is a chance that the Heights club may upset the dope and beat the Black and White.

WEST PENN MEETS

A meeting of the West Penn council will be held this evening at the usual headquarters. All representatives have been asked to be on hand.

Gladden has been dropped permanently from the Panhandle League by President John Smith. The moving around of players probably had something to do with the decision.

One thing the West Penn body should do—stop independent teams from playing in the territory of League clubs. The Panhandle League already has had the experience of a team dropping, and the players practically lining up with an independent outfit. These affiliations mean little, but they are hurting league teamss which should have exclusive right to their territory. If all of the teams decided to play independent football it would mean the end of the West Penn body.

Idaho Eleven Weakened by Seasickness

HONOLULU, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The University of Idaho football team, weakened by seasickness, arrived yesterday to play Alumni of St. Louis College of Honolulu Christmas Day. Idaho also is scheduled to play the University of Hawaii New Year's Day.

Jack Dempsey May Stage Miami Fight

The old man mauler, rumor has it, is due here Friday, and will be greeted with a proposition to take charge of the 1931 battle of the Everglades for the Madison Square Garden Corporation.

A scheme of Christmas colors will be carried out in tonight's basketball entertainment in the Pitt Stadium as the Big Green quintet of old Dartmouth attempts to do simply terrible things to Dr. Red Carlson's Pitt Panthers. The contest is the first of a series of banner holiday attractions, which will bring to the local court Syracuse, Purdue and Indiana, in the order named.

Willie Arture

Dr. Red fetched home his Pitt club from a successful swing through the Middle West. While hiking about the corn (on the ear) belt, his Panthers sent Ohio State, Marquette and Nebraska through the hoop, and lost only to Creighton. In sinking Ohio State and Nebraska, Doc's team avenged a tie and a defeat that marred the record of the Pitt football eleven.

The last time Dartmouth sent its basketballers here, the Green was served an unmerciful licking. At the time, Dartmouth was champion of the Eastern Intercollegiate League, the nearest thing in the East to the Western Conference. Today, however, it looks very much as though conditions would be reserved. Dartmouth has a strong quintet this year, boasts a nine-point margin victory over Syracuse, which in turn walloped Western Reserve, conquerors of the Panthers in the initial game of the year here.

KOWALLIS OUT

Willie (Docky) Kowallis, peppery and clever little forward of the Panther outlay, will not be available for duty against Dartmouth tonight. Docky suffered an injury to his right wing in the game with Creighton Saturday night, and Coach Carlson is going to keep him perched on the splinters this evening, hoping to have him in shape for the game Sat'day with Syracuse.

The Tipoff

The play of Bliss Flaccus, riding No. 1 on the Princeton University D polo trio against the Pittsburgh Hunt Club Saturday night, was worthy of comment. Flaccus starred here last night as the No. 1 and No. 2 man on the crack Shady Side Academy team. Since matriculating at the Tiger institution, Flaccus evidently has come under the hand of a skilful coach. He showed greatly improved form Saturday, and his play last year as a prep school rider left little to be desired.

Young Flaccus may never become a handicap player, but if there is a young player hereabouts who has a future, Flaccus is the boy. He rides hard and skillfully, and better mounted, I mean, astride a thoroughbred and trained polo pony, I think the young man would rate the regard of much more capable polo critics than myself.

Doc Carlson, head coach of basketball at Pitt, had a boost for local court officials in commenting on the treatment Pitt received from the arbiters in the game with Creighton University in Omaha Saturday night. Carlson, while loath to put the Western whistle tooters on the spot, did pass out a remark or two that are worth repeating.

"Where local officials are wont to lean a bit backward, if necessary, when it comes to handling a game in which a visiting, intersectional team is concerned," the Doctor told me, "it looked Saturday as though the boys were unanimous in the idea that Pitt was not to make a clean sweep of the Western trip. Creighton does not boast a club near as good as Nebraska. We outplayed them all the way, while Nebraska, to be perfectly fair, outplayed us."

Coach Carlson went on to pass the remark that Nebraska had the best team he or his players have looked at this year. He praised especially Bill Hokuf, the forward, who played an end on the Cornhusker football team. Hokuf, by the way, was a thorn in the side of the Panther football team this year.

SCHOOL HEADS SCORE BUTLER'S THEORY

PLAN IS HIT IN WIDESPREAD COMMENT

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's suggestion that all intercollegiate athletics be endowed by alumni to end the "importance of gate receipts" has brought forth a flood of comment, favorable and otherwise, from the country's college administrators and athletic officials.

The consensus seemed to be that the Columbia president's proposals might be sound enough in theory, but that they were not practicable, at least at this time. It was pointed out in some quarters that endowments for academic purposes are hard enough to get now.

Dr. Butler's further suggestion that an "Athletic League of Nations" might be needed to solve current athletic problems met with the rather general reply that the present athletic conferences, with their special rules and regulations, already fill any needs along that line.

WIDESPREAD COMMENT

Dr. Butler himself disclaimed any intention of inaugurating any specific campaign to put his proposals into effect. He made it clear he merely had set forth his own opinions on the subject.

Alonzo Stagg, director of athletics, University of Chicago, believes "athletics should be removed entirely from the influence of alumni bodies and administered as a regular department of the university."

Maj. John L. Griffiths, Big Ten athletic commissioner, thought each sectional group had enough rules already and could see no merit in the "League of Nations" idea.

LEADERS DIVIDED

President Ernest M. Hopkins, Dartmouth, thought the proposal worth consideration, but doubted that alumni endowment was the proper remedy to curb over-emphasis.

Prof. William R. Owens, Stanford, president of the Pacific Coast Conference, "would not limit such endowment to alumni, but would accept it from all available sources."

Thomas Putnam, dean of men, University of California, doubts "if the endowment plan would meet with the approval of the alumni and cannot see where it would solve the problem, anyway."

Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, Stanford coach, said "a lot of funny things" are suggested. "I don't think Dr. Butler's suggestion merits any comment."

NO HOPE—HUNTER

Dr. Forrest C. Allen and H. D. Gish, athletic directors at the Universities of Kansas and Nebraska, respectively, both thought there already was enough organization in the Big Six Conference and that Dr. Butler's League of Nations would be one ruling body too many.

Chancellor Frederick M. Hunter, Denver, could "see no hope for Dr. Butler's plan as a practical thing, at this date."

Walter B. Franklin, graduate manager of athletics, University of Colorado, thought it would be "eminently unfair to ask the alumni to finance athletics. Some of the younger schools with few graduates soundly entrenched financially would have to give up athletics altogether."

Prof. C. L. Hare, Alabama Polytechnic, president of the Southern Conference, pointed out that the school with the largest endowment would be in the same position as the school with the most money now.

ATHLETICS PROBLEM

Chancellor Charles M. Snelling, Georgia, thought the "greatest menace lies in the subsidizing of athletes" and that the problem of gate receipts is "secondary."

W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech coach, said Georgia Tech would have to abandon all sports now if it had to depend upon alumni.

Chancellor James H. Kirkland, business manager of athletics, Southern Methodist, said a "comparatively new school like ours and others in this section, wouldn't have a chance of raising" an endowment large enough to carry out the athletic program.

President Thomas S. Gates, Pennsylvania, said his school would "be glad to join in a thorough discussion of the problem."

LOCAL VIEWPOINTS

A fine theory, but one which very few colleges will be able to put into practice—this is the consensus of opinion of local college officials regarding the "endowed athletics" plan proposed by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University.

Because of absence from the city of many local college educational and sports leaders, only Clarence (Buddy) Overend, graduate manager of athletics at Carnegie Tech; Very Rev. M. A. Hehir, retired president of Duquesne University, and John D. Holahan, graduate manager of athletics at Duquesne, could be sounded out on the Butler plan. Overend characterized endowed athletics as desirable, but within the reach of only richly-endowed institutions. The Duquesne leaders said the conditions proposed by Butler were so difficult of attainment as to be entirely out of reach of Duquesne.

By JULIUS LEVIN.

Organized two years ago by Dr. L. G. Beinhauer, the Catholic Lyceum League is the only basketball circuit in Western Pennsylvania functioning successfully without the assistance of outside interests. The loop, starting out as a four-club circuit, composed of St. John, last year's champion; St. Joseph, St. Wendelin and St. Casimir, created so much interest in Catholic lyceum circles last winter that it was decided to enlarge the circuit. As a result seven clubs are seeking the championship this season. St. Luke, St. Henry and St. James were added to the list of franchise holders this year.

Dr. Beinhauer.

Dr. Beinhauer, who was the first president of the Allegheny County League, five years ago, has donated a handsome trophy to the team winning the Catholic Lyceum League championship for two years. St. John is making a determined effort to repeat this year to obtain permanent possession of the trophy.

CLOSE GAMES

While little is heard about the league in local basketball circles, the games staged by the Catholic Lyceum League teams are matches between evenly matched clubs and as a result fans are being treated to some excellent exhibitions.

The league at present is composed of clubs from the South Side and West End districts, but several teams from the North Side are reported eager to obtain berths. Plans are under way to increase the circuit to 10 or 12 clubs next season.

Two important games are scheduled in the circuit tonight, St. Wendelin playing at St. Henry and St. Joseph at St. John.

St. Joseph and St. John have been rivals in basketball for a number of years and their contest on the St. John floor tonight should prove a thriller. The two clubs met in the post-season series for the title last winter, St. John winning after three close battles.

The Mt. Oliver passers have not forgotten the setback suffered last winter and they are striving to turn the tables on their South Side rivals.

In the County League tonight the Lafayettes play at Ellwood City. The Penn Five and Knickerbockers, two old rivals, clash in the only West Penn League fray.

Independent games find the Y. M. H. A. Varsity B quintet at Aliquippa and the North Side Buicks at Manchester Community House.

The Cleveland Pennzoils, winners of eight straight games this season, will be the opponents of the Y. M. H. A. Thursday night. This team is champion of the Greater Cleveland district.

HOFFMAN HURT

The two-way benefit court program in the Duquesne University gym last night proved a big success. North Side Community, which was substituted for the Ray Schneiders at the last minute, took over the Charleroi Merchants, 41 to 38, in one contest, while the J. J. Mieles bowed before the Penn Five, 32 to 28, in the other. The action was marred by the suffering of a broken cheek bone by Capt. Artie Hoffman, of the Mieles, in the first quarter of their contest. He collided with Ammons. He was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital.

One Allegheny County League affray was run off the boards last night, Fintex taking a spectacular 32-30 victory over the championship-holding Duquesne Lafayettes on the latter's floor. As a result, Fintex is favored to grab first-half honors.

Only one other league battle was staged last night, DeSales winning from the Pittsburghers, 38-29, in the Greater Pittsburgh League.

Sport Vignettes

James (Red) Mason and Ray Alvis, handling Jackie Fields for the shoot Jack Kearns in the bout in which he knocked out Bucky Lawless in Detroit a few nights ago, made a betting clean-up on the go . . . They pooled $3,200 apiece, $2,400 and had no trouble finding takers because Lawless had just beaten Billy Townsend in Detroit and Fields, after winning the welterweight title three from Joe Dundee, made a bad fight when he dropped the laurels to Young Jack Thompson in the same city early this year . . . But Fields is on the way back . . . Before going to Detroit to wallop Lawless, he handed Paul Pirrone a first-class shellacking in Cleveland.

You may remember a story of about a week ago to the effect that Mason planned to buy Fields' contract from Kearns . . . After Jackie's two fine battles against Pirrone and Lawless, for which he collected around $11,000, Kearns is all pepped up on him and James the Red writes he will be lucky if he can induce the Doc to part with a half interest in Jackie now and let Red handle him, as he did in Cleveland and Detroit . . . Mason, who is working hand in glove with Kearns and Alvis and their fighters out of Chicago, reports that Tony Herrera, the Mexican lightweight star of the outfit, has gone to his home in El Paso, Tex., until after the holidays . . . He could have had the New Year's date at Motor Square Garden if he had cared for it.

Ohio University's football teams, under the coaching of Don Peden, Illinois halfback star in 1920 and 1921, have won 19 consecutive games beginning with their closing contest of the 1928 campaign, . . . You could call the captain of a varsity crew a gentleman and a sculler but for the fact that a member of a crew is not a sculler . . . A Christmas card from Portland, Ore., engraved Francis R. Flynn is from none other than the former promoter of the Moose Temple arena who now resides out there . . . Benny Bass will fight as a lightweight after defending his world junior-lightweight title against Lew Massey in their bout in Philadelphia, January 5 . . . He wants a crack at Tony Canzoneri, the new 135-pound champion, who defeated him in a bout for the featherweight crown . . . Already they're calling the windy Max Baer, the California heavyweight, Bugs Baer . . . Wait until the original Bugs Baer finds out about that.

There is no truth in the report that Scotch pros are giving away all of their supply of old golf balls for Christmas presents because the larger and lighter new ball will be the only official one after the first of the year . . . Why should Bill Alexander, of all men, be the one to agitate abolishing of the point after touchdown at the forthcoming coaches' meeting when his Georgia Tech team scores as few points as it does even with the rule in effect? . . . Funny people these coaches.—HARRY KECK.

CONNIE MACK FEELS FINE, 68 TODAY

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Keep young with the future, do not mellow in the past, was the substance of Connie Mack's message today on his sixty-eighth birthday.

As usual, the venerable manager of the World Champion Athletics, decided to go to his tower office at Shibe Park for a short time, looking after off-season baseball duties.

Friends told the veteran pilot that he looked splendid, to which he replied:

"I feel that way." And when it was intimated that he might be getting ready to retire, he shot back: "Not on your life."

Connie smiled when someone asked if he thought baseball was losing its grip on the public.

"A woman told me that a few years ago," he said, "I pointed out that she was wrong, that we were drawing bigger crowds than ever and that instead of attracting 750,000 in a season, we drew that many in two weeks or a month. She was merely losing interest and supposed others were doing the same."

Asked his opinion of night baseball, Mack said he had never witnessed it, and could not comment on its merits. It will be a long time, he thinks, before the question is considered seriously by the major leagues.

ERIE BOXER SHOT

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Fred Wenig, 26, Erie boxer, was wounded early today when an unidentified man fired three shots at him in a downtown street. Wenig was removed to a hospital with a bullet wound in one foot. Physicians said amputation probably would be necessary.

BONUS ABSENCE RILES BERGER

BY CHARLES J. DOYLE

A lack of appreciation for his home-run efforts is the fly in the ointment in the Walter Berger holdout case, according to reliable information coming from Los Angeles, home of the Braves' herculean swatter.

Wally Berger

Berger's friends say he will make a flat demand for $12,500 on Judge Emil Fuchs. Walter is said to have played through all last season for little better than a minor league salary and when there was no bonus forthcoming at the end of his banner year, the young man quite naturally was peeved.

It is the history of the game that when a player of remote circumstances develops quickly into an outstanding star or a "gate" attraction, his employer takes steps to reward him in a mercenary way. Contracts are torn up for better documents or a gift of cash is given.

MADE MANY HOMERS

Berger connected for 38 homers and before the season was over he was regarded as one of the best ball hawks in the league. Fleet of foot and carrying almost 200 pounds on his wonderful physique, Berger surely was one of the standouts of the season. He is said to have a Traynor disposition on and off the field, but Walter, doubtless must have felt there is something wrong with a system that does not recognize such qualities over the course of a six-months period.

The Braves are said to have made a lot of money last season. Berger, apparently, will collect his expected "bonus" when he agrees to terms of the coming season.

Berger's friends point out that if Judge Fuchs doesn't feel like paying him what he wants he will not have any trouble making a deal with a certain Mr. McGraw, of Manhattan.

There is an inference to the effect that the manager of the Giants made the Braves two offers for the outfielder during the season, but the Boston owners refused to part with the home-run clicker.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The Evening Sun says that Navy Bill Ingram, who has completed a five-year contract as head football coach at the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, may succeed Nibs Price as coach at the University of California.

KLAUS BACKS BELMONT

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, who has been kicking around several seasons now, up in the so-called chips a few times as a main-bouter and then down in the rut of the prelims, makes a new start Christmas afternoon, when he boxes Buddy Stewart, of Canton, O., in the main bout of a show for the benefit of the needy in the Rialto Theater, Aliquippa. Ray Eberle is the promoter.

Jimmy Belmont

Belmont is training under the direction of Frank Klaus, former middleweight champion of the world, who has convinced him that he was cut out to be a fighter and not a boxer. Klaus isn't his manager, but is showing a friendly interest in Jimmy. He may take over the reins later if Belmont comes through as he expects him to.

"Belmont has been fighting all wrong," Klaus said yesterday. "He is rugged and a good hitter and he has been standing back trying to outbox clever fellows. I think I have convinced him he must change his tactics to get over, and I look for A decided improvement in his work against Stewart."

Many friends of both Belmont and Klaus in Braddock will make the trip to Aliquippa to see the battle. Jimmy originally was booked to meet Jimmy McGraw on the card at Motor Square Garden on Christmas day, but the Garden released him so he could fight on top for Eberle.

Between Rounds

Vince Dundee arrived in town today from his home in Newark, N. J., for his 10-round main bout with Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, at the Garden Thursday afternoon. He was accompanied by his manager, Max Waxman, who also handled Joe Dundee, Vince's brother, when Joe was welterweight champion of the world. Vince is especially keen to win here because he is booked to fight Len Harvey, of England, the European middleweight champion, in Madison Square Garden, New York, on the night of January 9, and a defeat by McTiernan might knock him out of that plum and catapault McTiernan into the big Garden overnight in his place.

Joe Campbell, of Corapolis, will box Mike Lynch, of Erie, in the semi-final at Aliquippa Thursday. Jack O'Brien, of Aliquippa, is in with Lee Peer, of Philadelphia, in the second bout, and Frankie Portland, of Ambridge, and Eddie Guba, of Clairton, box the opener.

Promoter Apples Meyers, of the Moose Temple, has signed Marcus Noel, local Negro middleweight, to box Frankie Fry, of New Castle, in the six-round second bout of his Tommy Crawley-Andy Andrucci show Friday night. Al Becker and Billy Flanigan are in the semi-final.

Jim McGirr will stage his next professional show in the McKeesport Palisades roller arena on the night of January 8. Frank Novak, North Side heavyweight, who has stopped Nick Perlick and Dan Gallagher his last two times out, may be one of the principals in the main bout.

The Tommy Phillips A. C. stages another of its amateur boxing shows in the Columbus Hall, North Side, tonight.

Matchmaker Jules Beck, of Motor Square Garden, lost a chance to sign Eddie Shea with Andy Martin for his New Year's show when this pair were matched to head an all-star card in St. Louis on the night of January 2. Other bouts on the St. Louis bill are King Tut vs. Jackie Brady, Davy Abad vs. Bushy Graham, Denver Mickey Cohen vs. Sonny Myers and Marty Fields vs. Joe Rivers. Beck now is working on a Battling Bozo-Billy Jones bout for his second holiday date.

Billy Brent, local Negro middleweight, is remaining idle because the protomers can't get anyone to fight him. Whitey Whitworth, Billy's manager, says his protege is open to meet anyone from 154 to 158 pounds.

Larry Kaufman, of Louisville, and Billey Bulley, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., have been signed to take the place of the Jimmy Belmont-Jimmy Graw second bout at the Garden, Thursday afternoon. Billy Holt, of Homewood, and Joe Trippe, of Rochester, N. Y., are in the eight-round semi-final, and Don Frazier, of the Hill, and Angelo Vergione, of Swissvale, box the opener.

OSTER STOPS NORMAN

Onofrio Lauri

THE RECENT WORLD championship pocket billiard tournament, which resulted in the passing of the title from Ralph Greenleaf to Erwin Rudolph, also disclosed that there is a new contender with whom all the aspirants to the throne must reckon in the future. Onofrio Lauri, of Brooklyn, appears to have just about arrived. This wasn't his first appearance as a contestant for the title, but the form he showed surpassed any he had previously displayed. He finished in a tie with Frank Taberski for third place, and during his seven games he defeated in turn Benny Allen, Taberski, Pasquale Natalie and Arthur Woods. Besides, he proved the biggest obstacle that Rudolph had to overcome to win the championship, the most sensational match in the entire tourney having been the one in which Rudolph came from behind to beat Lauri by a single point, 125 to 124. In another year the rest of the stars may find it a hard job to keep the Brooklyn man from reaching the top of the heap.

MARKET MAKES SUBSTANTIAL RECOVERY

Rail Issues Again Lead List Upward; Trading Slackens on Advance

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The flurry of secondary selling abated in today's stock market, and the list made substantial recovery, with the rail issues again providing leadership.

Most of the pivotal shares attracted substantial buying a few points above their previous resistance levels, but trading was inclined to slacken on the recovery, as pre-holiday influences normally tend to restrict speculative activity.

There were numerous losses of 1 to 5 points in the morning, but they were mostly cancelled, and replaced by advances of 1 to 3 by early afternoon.

Preliminary reports of the volume of late holiday retail trade are too scattering to be particularly conclusive, but several department stores have experienced the best buying of the season at the start of this week, and over the week-end wholesalers received several rush orders of a fill-in character. Many organizations expect their volume will come within at least striking distance of last year.

Heavy industry is coming under the influence of the holiday and year-end inventory period. The Ford Motor Company has virtually shut down until January 5, and steel mill operations are slackening.

Iron Age, publishing its weekly review of the iron and steel industry a day early, said that ingot output had been reduced from 38 to 35 per cent of capacity, and might get down to 25 per cent during the year-end shutdowns. This has been expected, however, and the trade is more interested in bookings for January, which have appeared in such volume as to make a fair acceleration of activity practically assured.

As foreshadowed by yesterday's developments in copper, the Copper Export Association raised its price from 10.30 to 10.55c a pound, c.i.f., European base ports, and foreign sales continued in fair volume. Non-ferrous metal markets in London, however, were generally soft, bar silver losing much of yesterday's gain. The petroleum situation failed to brighten. Standard of New York cutting gasoline prices in the New York area.

Call money was fairly firm at 2 per cent, but was not expected to exceed that figure. The government overdraft in connection with its quarterly finacing has now been sharply reduced, taking substantial sums out of the market. Furthermore, holiday currency demands and other year-end requirements are now being felt.

Italian Growers To Cut Sugar Area

MILAN, Dec. 23.—Italian consumption of sugar for 1930-31 is estimated at 349,000 tons, whereas more than 434,000 tons will be available inclusive of 65,000 tons carried over from last year.

Beet sugar growers have undertaken to reduce the acreage sown to 260,000 hectares and in compensation duty on foreign sugar is to remain at 1.665 lire per 1.000 kilos until October.

Stock Exchange Topics

A prominent stock exchange firm points out that the market valuation of Gulf Oil at $65 a share was $269,614,000, compared with the high last year of $945,771,000. It adds that the 1929 balance sheet showed net working capital since of $117,032,000. Subtracting the amount from the present market value leaves $172,582,000 as the appraised value of the company properties, plant and equipment. The management of Gulf always has been considered ultra-conservative. The latest balance sheet carried property, plant, and equipment at $526,395,000, less accumulated depreciation reserves of $255,876,000. Because of those figures, that house has been recommending the stock to customers as a long pull investment with great merit.

The public attitude toward the oil stocks in recent months is reflected in Standard Oil of New York. That stock has been selling at levels to yield about 7¼ per cent or more, the highest for any time in the last 18 years. It was stated officially that in the first nine months the company had operating and non-recurring profits in excess of dividend requirements and larger than any former earnings, with cash and marketable short term securities amounting to more than $45,000,000. That stock logically could be one of the leaders in any change for the better in the market for oil issues.

Presidents of eastern railroads have been meeting to formulate a suitable four-track line plan. Hope is expressed in certain quarters that an amicable agreement will be reached. Reports have been heard that Washington authorities have been urging the rail executives to try again to settle their differences. The Interstate Commerce Commission, of course, would have the final decision. A considerable short interest exists in a number of rails, and such a development could lead to rather good covering.

An examination of the records of bear markets over the last 30 years shows no exception to the rule that in a cycle of declining tendencies prices invariably enjoyed substantial rallies from the December lows before the end of the year. As the percentage of decline in the Dow Jones Industrial average from the high of September 3, 1929, has made the 1929-30 major downward movement the greatest on record, approximating 60 per cent as of December 16. The extent of the break itself suggests that improved market conditions might well develop in the next 10 days.

Despite continuation of motion picture attendance below levels of a year ago, recent volume of business has been sufficienttly large to justify the estimate that aggregate 1930 profits of well-established companies will exceed 1929 figures. This accomplishment, however, will be more in reflection of theater expansion and economies than fundamental improvement in the industry; sum total intake of trade itself probably has been appreciably under that of 1929. Per share income in some instances may be restricted by the increased capitalizations which have accompanied expansion.

The approach of the period when year-end holidays interrupt the continuity of the proceedings is tending to throttle such initiative as had been shown in the speculative market recently. Only seven business days remain of the current calendar year and one of these is a Saturday. The Christmas holiday will break up the present week in such a manner that it is but natural the speculative element will refrain from making commitments in an extensive way, and the same holds true of the following week which will be broken by the New Year's recess. Moreover, such tax selling and other adjustment operations that remain to be completed only tend to complicate the situation from the viewpoint of the professional trader who is presently contributing the bulk of the daily turnover.

American Tobacco Cigaret Sales Increase

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Sales of Lucky Strike cigarets in November by the American Tobacco Company increased 419,322,000 over November, 1929. In October the increase was 504,725,000, and in September the gain was 655,429,000. Gain for the 11 months of 1930 was 5,566,658,000.

November cigaret production declined 1,089,861,274 from a year ago to 7,952,158,335. Cigar output was down 96,207,445 to 555,626,672. Snuff was off 335,436 pounds to 3,160,338 and manufactured tobacco 2,030,754 pounds lower to 22,815,370.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—The strong buying demand that has bolstered bond prices appeared today to have partly subsided. A small section of the list continued to advance, but most of the transactions were at concessions from the previous closing prices. The turnover was large.

NARROW DROPS IN LOCAL STOCKS

Slight Recessions Noted In Early Dealings, but Sales Volume Is Light

Prices receded slightly in the early dealings on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, but there was no conspicuous selling pressure and practically all declines were fractional in scope.

Trading interest centered in Lone Star Gas with several hundred shares changing hands on a slow move which carried the quotation under 22 for the first time since last Wednesday when the market executed its sudden turnabout. The other fuels were quiet and steady.

Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt, selling ex-dividend 25 cents, was off ¼ on its opening sale, and Standard Steel Spring was unchanged at 2b for a small lot.

Firmer tendencies on the New York Exchange at the end of the first hour encouraged the trading element and such selling as did take place here was mostly evening-up business in anticipation of the holiday.

Forbes

Insull Tells Why Recovery Looks Certain.

By B. C. FORBES

HAVE MANY other employers followed a similar course?

William F. Schmidt, San Francisco, writes:

"At least one big manufacturing concern took to heart your campaign to enforce unemployment, or at least not to INCREASE unemployment.

Mr. Forbes

The West Coast Porcelain Manufacturers, in spite of the falling off in their business (bath room fixtures), have kept practically all of their men at work — rehabilitating the plant, going over all the machinery and appurtenances, and, in addition, repainting the entire plant inside and out, also putting in concrete floors instead of the old wooden floors.

"Mention of their action may have a good effect on other firms. The thing to do during a lull in business is to get things in shape in readiness for further requirements."

MARTIN J. INSULL, Middle West utility leader, after remarking that 'today the state of mind of American business is an improved one, that it is possibly even better than business is at the present moment, affording strong indications that business is improving, as confidence and courage are prime requisites," raised the point often overlooked:

"We must recognize the simple but frequently obscured fact that not money but goods is the output of business. Our people must, in the end, receive their compensation in the form of goods—which is to say that their earnings must be devoted, within provident limits, to the consumption of goods if our economic machine is to function effectively. To consume goods we must have the courage to use our money to buy them. 'Payment in kind' is, after all, the fundamental basis of our business and determines whether times are good or bad.

"The electric light and power industry in 1930 presented a picture of rather happy adjustment to the primary necessities of our economic system. In a period when overproduction had become a problem, sales of power to large industrial producers of the United States as a whole declined, though not materially, compared with 1929. For the territory served by the Middle West utilities system, sales of power to large producers increased, but the rate of increase showed a considerable decline.

"On the other hand, sales of electric energy to domestic consumers, both in the United States as a whole and in the Middle West utilities territory, registered a satisfactory increase over even 1928.

"It seems to me that the trend of energy sales, and especially those of the past few weeks, is most assuring evidence that confidence and courage are growing in our industrial and trade system and must finally result in continuously improving business conditions."

SALES OF ALL high-priced things have not fallen off. For example, Lawrence P. Fisher tells me that sales of the 16-cylinder Cadillac have exceeded all expectations, and Walter P. Chrysler reports very gratifying demand for his new Imperial Eight. It still remains true that lots of Americans have enough money to buy whatever appeals to them.

Radiator Earnings to Show Decline

By GEORGE B. ——DER.

CURTAILMENT IN ALL TYPES of building construction except public works will be reflected in the earnings of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Corporation for 1930. Net profit will be substantially less than in 1929 when $20,012,171 or $1.94 a share was earned on 10,154,677 common shares after deducting dividends on $4,747,400 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock.

The company was formed early in 1929 by the consolidation of the American Radiator Company and the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company. In 1929 earnings showed only a moderate decline as compared to 1928. While residential building was sharply curtailed and the sales of Standard Sanitary reflected this condition, industrial construction was exceptionally active. This contributed to the sales of American Radiator and partially compensated for the decline shown by Standard Sanitary.

In 1929, the first year of the joint operation of the two companies, net profit of $20,012,171 was only slightly below the combined net profit of the two companies for 1928 when $21,283,327 was earned.

Full Economies Not Shown

THE NEW COMPANY has not had an opportunity to show the benefits of the merger. In 1929, as well as in 1930, conditions in the building industry have been on a downward trend. The help the two companies can be to each other may be indicated by the fact that intercompany sales in 1929 amounted to $16,745,470. Gross sales, including this item, were $181,797,144.

While the two units merged to form the present company, make different products, they are sold to the same customers and the organizations have been mutually helpful. American Radiator makes heating plants, including boilers and radiators for large buildings as well as residences. Standard Sanitary makes plumbing fixtures of all types. In recent years it has broadened operations by starting production of dish washing machines, clothes washing machines and more recently of vacuum cleaners.

Dividend Reduced

DIRECTORS OF AMERICAN Radiator and Standard Sanitary recently reduced the dividend to an annual basis of $1 a share from the previous rate of $1.50. It was officially stated that earnings for the present year will be equivalent to about 75 cents a share.

Since the consolidation of the two companies, production has been further broadened by the acquisition of additional companies which make products allied to heating plants and sanitary equipment. Among these was the Campbell Metal Window Company producing a type of radiator which fits into walls under the window sills.

Other companies have been purchased which make vitreous china ware, used in the products of Standard Sanitary.

Wheat Consumers Look for Price Gain

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—President Milnor, of the Grain Stabilization Corporation, states that reports indicate a reduction in domestic carryover of wheat of around 100,000,000 bushels as compared with the previous year as present low prices are stimulating consumption, both as food and feed. Demand for cash wheat is good, and many buyers are anticipating their seasonal requirements against probable higher prices.

Kitty Shows Connie Dad's Wedding Certificate

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The day before her marriage to Jim Tracy, wealthy Connie Calvert learns through Duke Garson, underworld character, of the existence of a half-sister, Kitty, by her father's secret first marriage. Kitty, a produce of the slums, demands $100,000 for her silence. Connie, glad to have found her sister, offers to take her home. Kitty refuses. Connie is favorably impressed by Duke's magnetism. When Jim objects to her interest in Kitty, Connie breaks her engagement. She realizes Jim is mainly interested in her money and that she does not love him. Connie tells her mother about Kitty. Connie sees Kitty and learns of her laborious daily struggle for existence.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI.

There was no sign of tears in Kitty Calvert's eyes as she exhibited to Connie the toil marks on her hands. No trace of self-pity in the harsh modulation of her voice—

"You needn't come around giving me good advice and preaching to me. I've been through the mill, while you've been sleeping on a feather bed. All I want out of you is what's mine."

"You don't like me, do you?" Connie asked, suddenly.

Kitty's lips quirked with a shade of decision. The previous night she had revealed softer moments, but now she was again hard and suspicious.

"You're all right, I guess. What does it matter as long as I get what is coming to me?"

The inner voice warned Connie that she should not judge her sister too harshly. Were the circumstances reversed she, herself, might easily be equally resentful.

Invites Kitty to House

"You don't have to worry about what's coming to you, Kitty. I want to give you things that money can't buy. It's up to you entirely whether or not you will make yourself able to accept them."

"You try me!" Kitty said, decisively. "I'm sick and tired of struggling along on poverty and hard work. I've got as much right to the best as you have, and I'm going to get it!"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean, how soon can you step out of where you are living now and go home with me," Connie said, quietly. "As I told you before, I want to take you home and let you share everything I have. It's yours by right—and, besides, I want to have you."

"Does your mother know about this?"

"I told her everything," Connie replied, "and she agrees with me thoroughly."

"It must have been a shock to her."

"It was, but she's game. She spent her whole life loving our father while he was alive, and after he died she went right on loving him. All she ever saw of him was the best side. She feels exactly as I do—that it's up to us to make good. You have a legal right, Kitty, in the estate, but it won't be necessary for you to exercise it, as you'll see."

Despite her deep, ingrained antagonism, Kitty Calvert's blue-violet eyes began to soften. Yet this was only momentary, for in the next instant they had become masked with hardness.

"I'd be out of place up there like a sore thumb," she mused. Maybe I just better take the money and let the rest slide."

"I'm not going to beg you to come," Connie told her. "All I can do is to make you the sincerest offer I know how. It would be a lot easier for mother and me to get the money together and write a check for you, but we both really want you."

Visits Kitty's Room

"It's not the money so much, after all," Kitty pronounced. "I just don't want to feel that I've been gypped out of what rightfully belongs to me, that's all. I guess you think I'm pretty hard boiled, don't you?"

"I'd feel the same way myself, probably," Connie told her.

"Garson is all for me taking the offer. We talked it over and he said it would be a great break for me. He's a great guy, Connie. If I went with you you would expect me to give up his friendship, wouldn't you?"

"Not if you really care for him."

"Oh, it's not a love affair. As far as I know, Duke doesn't fall for the dames, though. God knows, he could have almost any of them. But me—I don't love him and never will. We're pals, that's all."

"Then it's decided—you're coming?"

"I suppose so. Let's get out of this joint now, though. Come on over to my room—I want to show you some things."

Outside the Tenth avenue restaurant, which was their rendezvous, Kitty and Connie got into Connie's roadster and drove a few blocks to Kitty's living place. It was an old house with a sign, "Rooms for Rent," tacked up beside the door. As they stepped into the downstairs hall Connie entered into an environment that was utterly apparent. A gas flame flickered from a lantern, and the air, somehow, was flat and dull, as though it had been breathed over and over by many people. Her feet followed Kitty's up the worn strip of carpet, and, at the rear, into a small, square room. A narrow white bed, brass trimmed, with two knobs missing; a brown dresser with a clouded mirror, a couple of battered chairs, a sagging lace curtain—this, the furniture. A wave of pity struck Connie. A closet half open revealed a pathetically scant array of dresses.

See Father's Picture

"Sit down. Sit on the bed—"

Kitty opened the bottom drawer of the dresser and pulled out an old album covered with red plush. The gilt hinges and clasps had long since been tarnished.

"I want to show you something," she said to Connie.

She sat down beside Connie and opened the album.

"These people here in the front part," she said, turning the pages, "are my mother's folks; you wouldn't be interested in them. Here, now—"

The photograph she showed Connie bore the imprint of a Coney Island photographer. A young girl, strangely like Kitty herself, was seated on a strip of sandy beach; a girl scarcely past her twenties, wearing a wide chiffon hat and a dress with puff sleeves. Sitting besides her was a young man with a straw hat on the back of his head and a cigar between his fingers.

Connie had seen the young man's face in other photographs of the period. There was no doubt on earth he was her father. Even as Connie remembered him, his features were too similar to be mistaken.

"That's my mother and father," Kitty said, softly.

"Your father and mine," Connie replied.

From the back of the album Kitty picked out a folded paper. The ink of writing was dim, as was the printing, but there was no mistake—the authentic wedding certificate that bore the name of Connie's father. The girls were in the midst of these things, both curiously low voiced now and drawn mystically together, when someone ascended the stairs and rapped on the door. It was Duke Garson.

DAILY TRUE STORY — Murder!

"I've already killed Macfarland,"

"Yes, you told me."

The first speaker, known to Milliken, the waiter, only as Mr. Parsons, smiled cheerfully, as if the disposal of this Mr. Macfarland was a most satisfactory bit of work.

What amazed Milliken almost as much as to hear this man state coolly, and without boasting, that he had killed a man named Macfarland, was the way that Doctor Herman Weston "reacted."

"Reacted" was a favorite word with Milliken. Maurice Mordock Milliken was serving as a waiter in the grill of the very exclusive Papyrus Club from five until midnight, as a means to an end. The end being to join the ranks of Great Authors. Milliken always thought of Great Authors as though capital letters were used. He was taking a post graduate course in English and journalism.

Milliken knew Doctor Weston quite well. He had frequently served him in the grill of the club.

The man known as Parsons was practically a stranger to him. Once before he had served him, and a few times he had seen him at another table. He heard the doctor address him as "Parsons."

Milliken was amazed. How could a reputable doctor sit there and hear a man calmly admit that he had killed a man?

"Bring the steak," the doctor said.

Milliken went out to get it. His mind was on the untimely death of poor Macfarland.

Perhaps this Macfarland was an enemy to both men. Perhaps this man Parsons was just a hireling, engaged by the doctor to kill the man. Why should a doctor want a man killed? A dead man is of no value as a patient—Ha! Milliken had another thought.

"I'll bet it was to get a body for study—the doctors pay big money for bodies to experiment with."

Resume Conversation

"Shall I serve it, sir?"

"No, I prefer to carve it myself," Parsons said, although Milliken had addressed the doctor.

Milliken shuddered. What a ghastly, ghoulish, cold-blooded murderer this Parsons was, to be sure. He probably got hardened going out and killing victims and selling the bodies to doctors to study and practice on.

The two men ate for a few minutes to take off the edges of their appetites. Then they paused to sip some Canada ale, brewed up in The Bronx.

"You naturally had to kill Macfarland," the doctor said, taking up the conversation where they dropped it 10 minutes before, as keen-minded men are able to do.

"Naturally, but, being a man of medicine as well as surgery, Doc, tell me how the devil can I cover it up?"

"Get Suzanne out of the way."

"Then advise a method here and I'll see that Suzanne never interferes with the plans."

Milliken blinked rapidly. His brain was working at last. Here was not only material for some wonderful thrillers when he got to the point of writing, but it might be that rewards would be offered when the murders became known. That is where he would come in—he could use the money. And Doc, Weston was nothing to him. As for Parsons—any man who could talk so easily about murdering people ought to get the chair.

"Well," Doctor Weston said, after a few moments devoted to his steak, "there's Billings, you know."

Outlines Plot

"Could I trust him?"

"Why not? He's got a long record and just because he has been a taxi man for a year or so doesn't change the fact that he used to put anyone on the spot for as low as five hundred."

"But Doctor, I can't hire Billings to kill Suzanne. He would ultimately be caught and what he would have to say would be likely to gum up the whole works."

"He kills her accidentally — have him waiting to pick her up from her apartment and then he runs into a tree, leaping out before he does that. His car will go over that steep embankment up the drive. All Billings has to do is to swear that he swerved to save a child, that the shock jarred him out of the car. The little child was evidently taken away by the careless nurse who was responsible for leaving him alone for even a minute."

Milliken polished and repolished the finger bowls as he listened. He saw Parsons actually grin with pleasure.

"Absolutely must. Doc, Major Dawson made out the will some 10 years ago before he retired from legal practice. He knows that Macfarland and Mrs. Oliphant witnessed the will. With both of them mysteriously killed, he will recall old Daniel Greer's will and that they were witnesses. Then when Young Greer inherits the great Greer estate, the Major will become suspicious. He knows that Greer left the money to found a scientific school. Can't have him investigating too eagerly. I am going to have a hard time of it at best, covering up. I'm going to kill Dawson and I want you to tell me the safest way to do it."

Parsons was leaning forward, listening to the doctor when Milliken brought the coffee.

"—and then let him have it—the silencer will prevent anyone from hearing the shot," the Doctor was saying

"Thanks, Doc—I'll kill Major Dawson tonight!"

A couple members of the club entered the grill and took one of Milliken's tables. He had to go and get their order. He hated to miss a word that these two arch fiends of cold-blooded murderers were saying.

Milliken handed the doctor the check to sign. Parsons, being a guest of the club, could not pay.

"Well, how many is it now that you have killed?"

"Only four, Doc."

"With Suzanne and Major Dawson that makes it a round half dozen." Doctor Weston laughed. "Well, every man to his own methods, but that's one gosh-awful way to make money," he commented; "let's run up to my rooms and talk it all out."

Milliken knew what he would do—telephone to the police. He could send them to Doctor Weston's, where they would catch the men who had murdered four and were about to murder two more. He would do it the next time he came out for an order.

Milliken Shocked

"Absolutely, that is Milo Parsons," the second young man declared, "he has been up to the house to see my sister."

"Well," the first young man said, "I am going to meet him some day—I want his autograph. Take it from me, there's no chap writing today, or since Poe, who can turn out such thrilling and clever mystery stories as his."

"Sister says his newest one will be a corker—he told her about it—it's a secret, but I'll tell you, it's going to be called 'The Greer Millions'."

Milliken, who had heard every word of this, had dropped a heavy water carafe.

Milliken, Maurice Mordock Milliken, working to become a Great Author, had almost had the Great Author of the most successful mystery stories arrested for murder.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

Imaginary conversation between a father and mother whose son is "home" for Christmas vacation—

Father—I wouldn't cry about it, my dear—you'll catch a glimpse of him before he leaves.

Father—Why don't you set the alarm clock for 4 a. m. and wait at the head of the stairs?

Mother—I sat at the head of the stairs all last night—but only saw a messenger boy who called to get him a clean shirt.

Father—Of course, I haven't seen our boy, either—but I am philosophical about it. I do not cry and sniffle.

Father—Perhaps we can find someone who has seen him and get a good description of how he looks and how he feels.

Mother—Who shall we ask?

Intolerable Delay

There Must Be Leadership Somewhere That Will Force Action On the New Postoffice.

Frank L. Duggan, chairman of the Better Traffic Committee, submits a discouraging report on the postoffice project.

He tells of the futile efforts of his committee to find a satisfactory solution for the traffic problem involved, and asserts that virtually no progress has been made on the project for five years.

The proposed postoffice is perhaps the most glaring example of official incompetence that Pittsburgh presents. It is worse than the Town Hall.

We have been trying to get the postoffice for at least 25 years. The need for the building has been recognized that long.

We have the site, the money for construction of the building is available, and it is being preached far and wide that this is the time of times for such work because of unemployment and also because of the cheapness of building materials.

There surely must be leadership somewhere that will cut the Gordian knot and force immediate action.

Pennsylvania's Greatness

Leadership In Things of the Spirit as Well as In Material Wealth Is to Be Desired.

George H. Ashley, state geologist, has just issued a vest-pocket leaflet, with remarkable illustrations, which makes one proud to be a Pennsylvanian.

Although only thirty-second among the states of the Union in area, Pennsylvania is first in mining, first in power production, first in the manufacture of 42 important commodities.

Pennsylvania produces one-seventh of the world's coal supply, one-tenth of the world's supply of cement, and more pig iron than any other state or nation.

There are many nations which are inferior to Pennsylvania in wealth and industrial output.

It is not to be forgotten, however, that there are other things even more desirable for a people than possession of rich material resources.

The claims set forth by Mr. Ashley are unquestioned, but if we were to boast of leadership in civic righteousness, in freedom from individual poverty, crime and disease, and perhaps in education, our claims would be disputed.

A Lost Opportunity

Pittsburgh Has Missed Chance to Get National Air Races. Let Us Not Be Caught Napping Again.

Announcement that the National Air Races, "annually the biggest sporting and educational exposition of the aeronautical industry," will be held in Cleveland during the next five years is a painful reminder of an opportunity that Pittsburgh lost.

The Chamber of Commerce, the Aero Club and other organizations had submitted an invitation to the managers of the races to hold them here in 1931. High hopes were built on the opportunity it afforded to advertise the city as an aviation center.

It was planned, of course, to hold the races at the new municipal airport, which the citizens had been assured would be the last word in a commodious and well equipped aviation field.

Then came realization that the airport would not be ready, and it became necessary to withdraw the invitation.

Pittsburgh possesses in even greater degree than Cleveland some of the things which won it the races—notably central location in an area of large population. But we were caught napping.

Other opportunities to give the city prestige as an aviation center will come. Let us be prepared.

Good Work

It is cheering news that comes from New York in regard to the bandits who robbed the Perry State Bank.

Several men under arrest there have been identified as having stopped at the North Side dwelling where part of the robbers' loot was cached, and two are said to have confessed the crime.

Arrest of the Perry Bank robbers will instill fresh vigor into the search for the Verona and Manchester Bank bandits. The clues in those cases are not, perhaps, as encouraging as those found in the Perry robbery; but there was not much on which to go in the latter affair at first, either. The robbers made just one slip, but it was enough; when their carelessness came to light, the way was paved for following their trail.

The other bandits also probably have overlooked something, or will. Time works on behalf of the public no less than to the advantage of the bandits.

A New House of Worship

Beth Shalom Synagogue Will Be Important Addition to Pittsburgh's Architectural Beauty.

The Beth Shalom Congregation laid the cornerstone Sunday afternoon of a new synagogue, to cost $300,000.

New houses of worship are to be welcomed at all times. We believe it is safe to say that all the religious faiths represented in Pittsburgh preach good works, promote morality, reprehend crime and wrongdoing.

It will be a valuable contribution to the city's architectural beauty.

Nor is its value as a cultural asset to be overlooked.

Five Sheep—Count Them

Nature Is Really Wonderful.

BLUE SHEEP OF THE HIMALAYAS, 17,500 FEET UP

They were only 30 yards away from the photographer when snapped, yet it is hard to see them in the photograph. Arrows show where they stand.

And they live at a height of 17,500 feet, more than three miles up in the air. You could not breathe at that height.

Science tells you that these sheep are the products of evolution, that their ancestors, during ages past, have gradually adapted themselves to the high altitudes, steep rocks, scanty supply of food, and that their color has gradually changed so that they are almost invisible even "close up."

They were all created on the same day, with the other animals, rhinoceroses, elephants, tigers, lions, wolves, cheetahs, more than 20,000,000 kinds of insects, gorillas, whales and dolphins.

Each man in this country is entitled to his own opinion and his own belief. Certainly if these Ovis Nayaur did live in the Garden of Eden, they probably didn't have any rocks like these to live on, and they certainly didn't have to breathe an atmosphere 17,500 feet up, while Adam and Eve could not have lived at that elevation.

Herschel, Breaker of Sky-Barriers

By Archibald Henderson

The career of Sir William Herschel is one of the most stimulating and extraordinary recorded in the annals of science. Such a story contains the inspiration which comes from success achieved through unremitting labor, unlimited patience, broad views, and an ideal pursued steadily throughout life. Upon Herschel's tombstone are graven the Latin words: Coelorum perrupit claustra—He broke through the barriers of the skies. By his labors, his spectacular discoveries, his inventive talents, he turned the attention of astronomers forcibly in the direction of observational astronomy. He laid the foundation for some of the most important theories regarding the major sidereal features, and the movements of the heavenly bodies as a whole.

Herschel was a musician, an inventor, a scientist, a discoverer. Born in Hanover, Germany, November 15, 1738, the son of a musician, he early displayed great musical talent. At the age of 19, he went to England and for many years supported himself by means of his musical abilities. Step by step he advanced in his profession until at the age of 28 he was made concert director at Bath. Some years later, a brother, Alexander, and his favorite sister, Caroline, joined him and took part in the concerts which he directed.

It has been said that the reading of Ferguson's Astronomy fired Herschel with the ambition to explore the heavens and to examine for himself the countless wonders to be found there. Unable to purchase a telescope, he set about the stupendous task of making one! After no fewer than 200 failures, he finally succeeded in making a reflecting telescope of five and a half feet in focal length and five-inch aperture. Eventually he succeeded in becoming probably the most expert manufacturer of telescopic mirrors who had ever lived. He made telescopes for sale, receiving as much as $15,000 for one. In this way, he made enough money to enable him to manufacture a huge 40-foot instrument, upon which he was engaged for four years. It was, however, with his 20-foot reflector that Herschel chiefly carried on his stupendous task of making a thorough-going survey of the heavens.

On March 13, 1781, Herschel with his 20-foot reflector discovered a heavenly body which he took to be a comet. Although he carefully studied this new object, proved that it had a perceptible disc, and found that it moved among the stars, it never occurred to this modest amateur astronomer that the new object he had discovered was a planet. He announced the newly discovered body to the world as a comet. After some months, during which this body was kept under observation by leading astronomers of the world, it was discovered that its orbit was circular. When it was realized that the new body was a planet, Herschel immediately became immensely famous for his spectacular discovery. The planet, named by Herschel Georgium Sidus, and by others "Herschel," was eventually given the title Uranus, which it now bears.

The list of Herschel's discoveries is imposing; but it scarcely gives a correct idea of the importance of his work and influence upon the future development of astronomy. He catalogued more than 800 double stars, and more than 2,000 nebulae. He is the author of the fruitful modern theory that these nebulae are "island universes," and thus gave an extraordinary impetus to their study, taken up vigorously in very recent years. He likewise discovered that the sun, which carries along the entire solar system, is moving toward a definite point in space, which he reckoned to be near the star Lambda Herculis; and later studies have confirmed this, although the point is not precisely that which Herschel found. Herschel made important studies of Mars, of "spots" on the sun, of Jupiter and Saturn; and discovered new Saturnian and Jovian satellites.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Are you born yet?

No, that isn't a ridiculous question. Your body has been born, of course—you've had a physical birthday. But have YOU—the thinking, feeling YOU, for whom your body is but a house—have YOU been born yet? Has your MIND been born into this world? Has your HEART found its place in the human program? Or are you still lying locked in a strange, dim world of your own—a narrow, padded, infantile world that has no relationship to the vast, free world of reality?

All around you can see people who are living like that—people who are LIVING UNBORN LIVES. They eat, they sleep, they move about—in a sense, they work and play. We've pet slang phrases for their condition. We say they're "only half there" . . . that they "they don't click" . . . "don't know what it's all about."

They COULD know what it's all about. They aren't feeble-minded or incapable of emotion. They have brains to learn with, hearts to feel with. But they've never been wholly born. They have never emerged from an infantile stage—never taken their places in adult life.

People like that look mature. You think they are mature. But they are constantly surprising and disappointing you by acting like babies—because their undeveloped natures still ARE babies. They are usually afraid to go to new places, take new jobs, risk unusual situations. They call this being conservative. Actually, it is cowardice. They cling to accustomed conditions as a child clings to its mother's hand.

Also, they lack a sense of proportion. Being children, they see life as a child sees it, with themselves in the center of every picture. They cannot realize that human experience is all of a piece.

The things that happen to them are of paramount importance. They magnify their pains, and make a great virtue of their sensitiveness.

And always these Unhatched Eggs are trying to evade reality and escape from life. Some of them escape in booze—some in drugs—some in fanaticism—some in day dreams—some in eccentric ideas which gradually develop into insanity. Insane people are frequently people who have become so terrified or angry at life that they refuse to grow up and are taking refuge in the fantasies of childhood. Some lunatics, as they sit brooding, actually take the attitudes of unborn children, knees hunched under the chin, arms wrapped about the knees.

Birth, we think, is the commonest experience. We are sure it must come to everyone. Yet 100 per cent birth is extremely rare. It is doubtful in fact, if anyone is ever entirely born. We all have baby streaks. Sometimes we want to have those streaks—and stubbornly retain them. Sometimes our parents force them upon us. Many a doting mother keeps her child HALF BORN all her life, refusing to sever the cord that binds its spirit to her, glorying in its dependence upon her.

ARE YOU BORN YET? IF SO, HOW MUCH? Answer that question, and maybe you'll be surprised.

(Copyright, 1930, King Features Synd., Inc.)

It's all right to be proud of your ancestors, but don't lose sight of the fact that you may be an ancestor yourself some day.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—That new, aloof shopping district suddenly flung up around the Plaza fountain on 5th avenue has become the most exclusive strip in the city. By night it suggests the sepulchral white of the Taj Mahal and by day a glorified and squirmy rue de la Paix.

Its shops offer a glitter—a new note in modern magnificence. Here one finds $4 a pound candy, $15 facial massages, $60 orchidaceous boquets and perfumes of Arcady at $50 an ounce. Some of the salons are in the ornate fronts of expensive hotels flanking the district.

What was once the red-bricked chateau of Vanderbilt, pere, is now a snow-white facade, housing a hat shop whose rental exceeds $100,000 a year and a dressmaking parlor with a reputed rental of a quarter million. Cater-cornered is a stately bank of cream marble.

A beauty parlor with a black onyx front trimmed in white is outfitted at a cost "higher than a cat's back." Another atelier entirely of chromium and beveled mirrors is a sunburst of silvered splendor. Still another will offer a coppery sheen of golden brown.

The whole effect has the clean, scoured look of a Holland house front. I am told clerks in the area are paid one-third higher than those in other high-class sections. Some wear frock coats and lapel flowers. The inward show is reflected by the outside display of door flunkies.

When they appear for work in uniforms their trappings suggest the fanfarole of the changing guards at Whitehall. One who caught my eye was adorned with a great coat of Delft blue and the spreading military cape was lined with something very like white ermine.

Many establishments have what they call reception clerks who receive the limousined arrivals, find out their desires and turn them over to the proper attaches. But the neatest touch is a beautiful Chinese girl in one place whose sole job is to hold lights for waiting ladies' cigarets.

The astonishing success of Sophie Tucker in perfidious old Albion continues to thrill Broadway friends who hitherto regarded Sophie as only a husky voiced coon shouter. She has always been popular in London cabarets, but this season in straight musical comedy kept a sedate London crowd applauding until after 1:30 a. m. A British firm has named a cigaret for her and she is the toast of many knee-breeches affairs. You know: Fawncy seeing you heah!

Sophie Tucker, as I recall, came out of the obscurity of a Hartford hashery and made her first bid for New York acclaim in old Reisenweber's on The Circle. Blonde, Amazonian and amiable, she was a sharp contrast to the silken voiced hostesses of that decade. She has a grown son upon whom she lavishes her generous affections.

* * *

Miss Tucker has been the peg for many Broadway gags. One of the most hilarious concerns her first afternoon at the Palace after a triumphant tour of Europe. It was a typical "Oh, yeah?" audience and Miss Tucker's offering fell flat. In the wings awaiting to follow her was a group of Singer midgets. As Miss Tucker stormed off she exploded temperamentally to the stage manager: "It is a swell mess when an artist can't leave this stage without finding herself hip-deep in midgets."

I rode last night with my first woman taxi driver, a short haul of only six blocks, but it struck me the driving was more carefully done than usual. It is a trifle difficult to tip a lady face to face and in the subsequent embarrassment my fee was larger than usual. "Half of that would be plenty," she said. My knees sagged so suddenly from surprise, I am still a little loop-legged.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

There is no friend so disappointing as the self-satisfied one.

If you feel that you have accomplished all that you care to gain in this world and reached a position which is good enough for any man you must be easily pleased.

You may have gained a fortune, but be uncultured and untraveled.

At every opportunity he will tell of his early struggles and how he surmounted them and what a success he has made from a poor start.

Most men of prominence have had to work hard and long to get where they are and then have to keep going or they begin to fall back.

Holding yourself up as an example of hard work, perseverance and pluck shows you have reached your limit and are going the other way.
